After Being Driven From Mexico, Bunco Artist Sought Refuge in U. S., State Officers.

Abandoning a rum ship just before it was captured, escaping from Mexico on the eve of his arrest, and consorting with a band of international crooks to whom he appealed for protection against the law, are a few of the experiences of Floyd Woodward, Atlanta's million-dollar bunco king, as revealed by Philadelphia police Saturday.

With this announcement officers stated that they have every reason to believe that Woodward is in hiding near Philadelphia, and that they have a good chance to collect the $1,000 reward offered by Atlanta authorities for his arrest.

Letters Tell Story.

Part of the story told by Philadelphia officers was learned through letters captured in a raid on confidence men, and the rest through operations of federal officers who have been hot on Woodward's trail ever since his flight from Atlanta about five years ago.

Soon after leaving Atlanta, according to officers, Woodward sought protection of a gang of international crooks, headed by "Dapper" Dan Collins.

Collins, Woodward, and a woman, whose name is not known, became interested in the rum ship business, but hard luck pursued them and they were forced to abandon their ship and car-

DAVIS NOW READY TO PRESENT CASE

Final Touch Put On Acceptance Speech—Will Devote This Week to Campaign Organization.

Locust Valley, N. Y., August 2.—John W. Davis is ready to present to the country his case as the democratic presidential candidate.

Here in his Long Island home he put the final touch today to his address accepting the nomination by the New York convention. He will deliver it at Clarksburg, W. Va., a week from next Monday in inaugurating what he has determined to make an intensive campaign.

Mr. Davis now will be able to give full attention to the completion of his campaign organization and will devote much of his time early next week to that phase of his campaign. He plans to leave Wednesday evening for Hyde Park, N. Y., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and to attend the annual basket picnic of the democrats of Dutchess county, which is to be held near Hyde Park on Thursday.

Will Confer With Smith. While in Hyde Park, the nominee will confer with Governor Smith, who is to speak at the picnic. It may be that he will see the governor earlier for the purpose of again urging him to become a candidate to succeed himself.

Reports of a rift between the nominee and the governor were denied today at Mr. Davis' New York headquarters, where it was stated that no significance was to be attached to the fact that both Mr. Davis and Mr. Smith were in New York yesterday without conferring.

Mr. Davis directed Thomas J. Spelacy, director of the eastern campaign headquarters, to serve a notice on Governor Smith, which would be arranged for early Monday, unless the governor should desire to proceed to Albany immediately upon his return from a yachting trip.

Later, the nominee himself declared

TO RENT CHEAPLY

Peterboro, N. H., August 2.—Young Spencer Piper—the Piped Piper of Peterboro—who furnished this community with mouse-destroying felines last summer, is back in business. He has pasted the following notice at Stony Lake:

"Cottagers tormented by mice, take notice. Spencer Piper, of Limos Island, has cats for rent, good mousers, 10 cents a week. Kind to children, do not scratch or spit."

Young Piper, whose home is in Toronto, made good spending money last year with his cat business. He expects to do the same this summer. While pasting up his notice, he rented two cats.

PNEUMONIA LOOMS
FOR MAN WOUNDED
BY POLICE BULLET

Farlow, Shot in Automobile Chase Early Saturday, Losing Grim Battle for Life.

THOROUGH PROBE
PROMISED BY JETT

Three Officers Claim Chase and Pistol Battle Followed "Tip" on Liquor Convoy.

Wounded by a bullet fired by city police officers Saturday morning during a hair-raising automobile chase on the Mayson-Turner road, F. E. Farlow, of 16 Jett street, lies in Grady hospital fighting a grim losing battle against the deadly clutches of pneumonia.

Despite the fact that physicians had worked desperately through the whole day, fighting against an attack of pneumonia on the lungs of the wounded man, they expressed doubt Saturday afternoon that he would live more than a few hours.

Mrs. Farlow, tears in her eyes, had remained by the bedside of her husband throughout the day.

Chief E. L. Jett, who is conducting an investigation of the shooting, declared that he was not prepared to make a statement Saturday afternoon. However, he stated, as soon as a thorough probe is completed he will act according to its result.

To Take Prompt Action.

The officers told him, the chief stated, that they were fired upon by occupants of the car which they believed to contain liquor. He stated that he would leave no detail uncovered to get at the truth of the affair.

In a report made by the three officers, they stated that they had received information that two liquor cars were going to pass over the Chattahoochee on the Mayson-Turner road, and it was while they were returning to Atlanta to get a squad of county police officers that the two machines came up behind them.

BIG FLOOR LEASE ANNOUNCED HERECasualty Company To Move to Atlanta—Many Employees To Make Change.

Lease of the entire third floor of the Brown buildings, corner Marietta and Forsyth streets, by the Georgia Casualty company in preparation of moving its main offices from Macon to Atlanta, was announced here Saturday. Space included in the transaction is in excess of 11,000 square feet, and additional space is said to be under consideration.

The lease was signed by W. E. Smith, president of the company, and V. L. Blair, manager of the Brown building, following negotiations which have been in progress since early in June. It is to take effect October 1 and to run for a long term of years, in consideration of a large aggregate rental, which was not revealed by officials of the Brown building.

Levi Cate Used Gun to Car-

Jasper, Ga., August 2.—(Special)

Posse tonight are scouring Pickens county for Levi Cate, charged in warrant issued at the sheriff's office here with shooting his brother, Hobert Cate, to death, and wounding his father, W. L. Cate, Pickens county policeman, in a family row at the Cate home, about 12 miles west of here, about noon today. The father will recover, doctors announced early tonight.

Levi had been drinking and arguing and his brother and father were trying to quiet him, when he flashed his gun and fired, according to reports here. Other details of the shooting were lacking tonight, as only members of the family were present and they refused to discuss the tragedy.

Levi is married and is the father of ish views were widely divergent on technical points which the experts during the day and night sessions the past few days vainly tried to settle. Ambassador Kellogg made a short speech giving his opinion as to what should be done, and quick agreement followed.

During the past two days all of Premier Herriot's proposals calling for application of the principle of arbitration to differences arising in operation of the Dawes plan were modified and adopted, with the exception of a diplomatic point involving the powers of the transfer committee, which is the heart of the Dawes plan.

Worked Late at Night.

The experts sat around the table most of Thursday night, but could not reach an agreement. They continued their efforts throughout Friday, remaining at Downing street until 3 o'clock this morning. Spent a few hours rest, they returned again at 10:30, hoping to conclude their work before the plenary session convened, but being unable to do so, the problem passed to the chief delegates.

The British and French were widely separated on the question of applying arbitration to the transfer committee's work, and when their views were restated in the plenary session, the conference adjourned to a plenary session, the last work of the conference.

At the conference, Ambassador Kellogg, who is the chief negotiator, made a statement which brought an agreement on this particular issue and final success to this phase of the conference work.

After conclusion of the plenary session, Presidents MacDonagh, President Theunis, of Belgium; Premier Herriot, of France; M. Hyman, the Belgian foreign minister; Baron Hayashi, the Japanese ambassador, and Professor de Stefani, the Italian finance minister, framed the invitation to Germany which Mr. MacDonald, as chairman of the conference, dispatched.

Not Worried Over Germans. So elated are the delegates over today's success that they are not worrying about developments after the Germans arrive. It is expected that Dr. Stresmann, the German foreign secretary, and his colleagues will descend to state Germany's case very fully, and they will be given ample opportunity to do so.

American official circles believe the Germans are coming to London and a reasonable frame of mind will be received by a high American authority tonight. One point which Dr. Stresmann surely will raise is the question of military evacuation of the Ruhr. The Americans expect he will demand this be brought about more speedily by progressive steps which have been informally agreed upon by the French, Belgians and British during the conversations held outside the present conference.

Completion of the conference labors today enabled the delegates with the exception of President MacDonagh to get a much-needed rest. The premier hurried from the foreign office to the colonial secretary and William T. Cosgrave, head of the Irish Free State, on the Irish question.

Diplomatic Take Vacations.

Ambassador Kellogg went to Coombe Hill for a few hours of golf; Premier Herriot, very much worn by the arduous work, had last week sought a physician; Mr. Logan swam aboard a train for the Channel on a short visit to Paris, while most of the other delegates are seeking the quiet in the country. Mr. MacDonald went to Chequers Court late tonight.

Ambassador Kellogg, who is the chief negotiator, showed little sign of fatigue, although he has attended every plenary session and meeting of the chief delegates. The conference has kept him at Whitehall until 8 o'clock at night, and he has been起起落落, rising and often necessitated early morning rising for diplomatic breakfasts, which are popular with British miners.

When the conference adjourned this morning, there were crowds waiting outside the plenary hall of the Savoy. The newspapers recall that there were similar crowds on the very same Saturday a decade ago when Europe was at the edge of the World war, which brought the problems this conference is trying to settle. Monday is the tenth anniversary of Great Britain's declaration of war.

Recommendations Unanimous.

The conference was unanimous on the recommendations submitted to it by the committee studying the question of Germany's possible default under the Dawes plan and the sanctions to be applied.

One point which Dr. Stresmann surely will raise is the enlargement by the appointment of an American citizen, to be named by the reparations commission, if it can reach an unanimous vote; otherwise, The Hague court.

In the application of sanctions, it is stipulated that "if a default by Germany is established, the reparations commission will forthwith give notice of such default to each of the powers and make such recommendations as to the action to be taken in the consequence of such default as it may think necessary."

From any vote that is not unanimous, any member of the reparations commission, who has been appointed by the vote, may within eight days from the date of the said decision appeal to a commission composed of three impartial and independent persons whose decision shall be final.

American To Be Chairman.

The chairman of the arbitral commission, it is stipulated, shall be an American citizen.

This concession to the principle of arbitration was granted to placate the bankers' opposition, but the right to separate action by France in the event of German default, which the bankers steadily opposed as jeopardizing the war reparations, is given to the German loan would seem to be maintained in the phrase setting forth that "all existing rights of the signatory powers under the treaty of Versailles, read with the Dawes report, are reserved."

Germany shall be declared in default; it is further stipulated "the signatory governments, acting with the consciousness of joint trusteeship for the financial interests of themselves and of persons who advance money upon the lines of the Dawes plan, will confer at once on the nature of the same to be applied and the method for their rapid and effective application."

The provision that all Germany's public assets shall constitute a lien for the loan in event sanctions are applied for a default, never contested, is retained.

The experts' committee's report recommends the reparations transfers, which in the plenary session also adopted, contain five resolutions.

The first asks Germany to give assurances that it recognizes the transfer committee's right to purchase any commodity on an ordinary commercial basis after the treaty of Versailles obligations have been fulfilled. Coke and dysentery are particularly mentioned.

Other assurances are asked that no maneuvers in Germany should prevent the allies from purchasing needed goods.

The second resolution recommends that Germany be asked to accept the establishment of a special commission, not exceeding 12 members and consisting of an equal number of allied and German representatives, to determine the procedure for placing orders and the conditions for carrying out deliveries in kind. In case of a committee disagreement, a neutral can be selected as the seventh member.

The third resolution provides that in case of differences between Germany and the transfer committee over purchases of goods, a neutral arbitration is to be chosen by agreement between the two parties, or, failing agreement, by the president of the Hague court.

The fourth outlines methods for modifying the Dawes plan. It provides for appeal from a decision of the reparations commission, with the American member sitting on the committee of three independent, impartial members who have been appointed to the reparations commission, deciding unanimously, and Germany, or, in case of disagreement, by the president of the Hague court. The reparations commission first must submit a charge that a defect has occurred to the committee, consisting of an agent-general for reparations, the trustee for railways and industrial bonds, railway commissioner, bank commissioner and commissioner of controlled revenues.

Arbitration Again Applied.

The fifth resolution provides two methods for applying the principles of arbitration to the question whether financial maneuverers are occurring.

If the transfer committee is divided equally on the question, appeal can be made to an arbitrator, who shall be a financial expert selected by the members of the transfer committee, or, lacking unanimity, by the Hague court.

The second method can be applied if the funds at the disposal of the agent-general accumulated in Germany reach 5,000,000,000 gold marks and the transfer committee has decided that financial maneuverers have not taken place in Germany. Any independent members of the committee may appeal within eight days to the international tribunal, consisting of three independent, impartial financial experts, including an American citizen, who will act as chairman. Such experts are to be selected by the committee unanimously, or, failing unanimity, by the president of the Hague court.

GERMAN DELEGATION WILL START MONDAY.

London, Aug. 2.—(By the Associated Press)—Official announcement was made tonight that the German delegation will start for London Monday. It will be composed of Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresmann, Finance Minister Luerth and Herr von Schubert, foreign office counselor.

Representatives of Prussia and Bavaria, with several experts, will accompany the delegation.

GERMAN CABINET MAPS COURSE AT LONDON.

Berlin, August 2.—(By the Associated Press)—President Ebert presented an executive session to the cabinet today at which the line of action to be followed by the German delegates at the London conference was mapped out. It developed that at least a dozen undersecretaries will accompany Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresmann and Minister of Finance to London.

The League of German Industrialists has published a formal communication in which big business interests protest against what they term attempts to curtail the fundamental principles of the Dawes report as originally enunciated. It warns the government that it must insist upon rigid adherence to the provisions of the experts' report as accepted by Germany.

In the absence of a definite outline of the conclusions reached thus far in London, the German newspapers' editorials are continuing to stress resistance to the proposal that Chancellor Marx will be confronted with the Hughes management and with Hughes that the first and foremost principle of American political campaigning was being violated.

Specifically, this author makes the point that Hughes, instead of talking about himself and about issues of his own creation—instead of that, Hughes talked about Wilson. All the other republican leaders and spellbinders talked about Wilson. Even Roosevelt, a proved political strategist, was—he made the mistake of talking about Wilson, because Roosevelt so loathed Wilson, that he could not restrain himself. As this author says, "They were all in a sweat, and talked about Wilson and Wilsonism." That Wilson needed to do and did that Wilson never was to come out onto the porch at his summer residence, in calm pauses, to talk about Wilson.

As the author concludes, "Nobody talked about Hughes. This is fatal. To campaign about your opponent and your opponent's policies is one thing; to campaign also against him and his policies is the worst error of all in the varied collection of errors."

DAVIS MUST TAKE STAGE.

It goes without saying that in this lies Mr. Davis' best opportunity for himself and for the party. If Mr. Davis should not happen to do it, it is not due to the "Great Coolidge" but to his lack of ability to do it, it is not up to the president in office to take the lead in this way. By virtue of the fact that he is in office, he has the lead. He is familiar to the public. His official acts are known to the public. The public judges him on performance. In the nature of the situation, this role of taking the center of the stage must be filled by the attacking candidate or it is not filled at all.

As between Davis and La Follette, if Davis fails to take the center of the stage La Follette is not likely to do so. La Follette is a little like Coolidge in that he has long been before the public eye. Most of the public has already appraised him. Also, La Follette is a man of unusual temperament, and that he is a little like Bryan. He has been so long before the public that he is in some risk of being showman. La Follette has been a potential candidate for the presidency in four campaigns preceding this one.

LA FOLLETTE FAMILIAR TO PUBLIC.

Not only is La Follette's personal familiarity to the public. So also are his ideas. Most of those ideas are either so old that there is no thrill in them or so radical that they seem remote.

What La Follette is doing during this campaign is already well known and it engages but little public attention.

The fact that so much of the space that newspaper devote to politics has been for the last few weeks focused on La Follette—that is due partly to the absence of political topics in which the public is vitally interested.

That is the reason that La Follette has been emphasized, namely, that Davis has not yet begun to function.

An additional reason is that La Follette, and those close to him, have a greater genius for publicity, a sharper understanding of the mechanism of publicity and greater art in the field.

All this understanding in the art of publicity, however, would be as nothing if there should emerge into the public consciousness something real in the way of a personality and something vital in the way of principles.

Davis, if he happens to have the talent, can readily crowd La Follette into the background.

ANTHRAX EXPERIMENTS HELD TOO DANGEROUS

Washington, August 2.—Secretary Wallace has refused to permit experimentation in the United States with the foot and mouth disease, which has recently caused such heavy losses in cattle in California, but which is now under control. Suggestions from medical men, particularly the Los Angeles department of agriculture to carry out or authorize investigation have been answered by Secretary Wallace with the statement that the disease already has been the subject of prolonged study.

"In view of its highly contagious nature and especially the economic losses caused by the foot and mouth disease in which the disease exists," Mr. Wallace said in a letter to the Los Angeles association "does not seem wise to entertain suggestions which contemplate keeping the disease in stock in any of the United States or any lands adjacent." The methods of eradication which the association has followed have kept the United States free from the disease except for the occasional outbreaks."

EX-JUSTICE SHIRAS DIES AT PITTSBURG

Pittsburgh, Pa., August 2.—George Shiras, Jr., justice of the United States supreme court from 1892 to 1903, died in a hospital here today from pneumonia which developed after he fractured his leg in a fall at his home here five weeks ago. He was 70 years old.

Mr. Shiras at the time of his appointment to the supreme court by President Benjamin Harrison was one of the leading members of the Pennsylvania bar. His position of associate justice was the only public office he ever held, although in 1881, when a protracted deadlock occurred in the election of a United States senator in the Pennsylvania legislature, his friends presented his name for consideration. After more than a month had elapsed without a choice, the contending factions agreed on Mr. Shiras. When notified he promptly wired his refusal of the offer.

After his retirement he spent the afternoon of Sunday, July 28, in which a woman standing on the porch of her home near by, was wounded. F. E. Farlow was indicted by the grand jury, and was at liberty under bonds of $500.

Jerry Farlow, with Will Knight, the chief said, was sentenced to the state prison for the murder of a nightwatchman near Cartersville, Ga., about ten years ago. He escaped, but recently was arrested on a liquor charge, and was returned to the chaingang, the chief said.

Police are searching for the driver of the machine in which F. E. Farlow was shot. He turned from the machine and escaped as the police denied knowing the driver, and claimed that they simply accepted him off of a ride.

Shot In Back. A bullet from a revolver in the hands of one of the officers passed through the back of the machine and drilled into Farlow's shoulder, penetrating the upper lobe of the lung.

According to the story told by Farlow from his bed at Grady hospital he and his brother, W. E. Farlow, were driving in front of their car and stopped. There being nothing else to do, since he couldn't turn either to the right or left, Acree slapped on the emergency break, almost skidding into the car. As the automobile blocked our car its occupants signaled him another car behind him to stop on his side."

go, just before a raid by police officers.

Collins and Woodward Flee.

Collins fled to France where he was captured in Paris and brought to the United States and placed in jail.

Woodward took a trip to Mexico and for a time evaded pursuit. Officers finally picked up his trail and the bank king left just in time to escape down the coast.

Thought the place was a swell

Floyd Woodward, of Atlanta, who is wanted there as leader of a million dollar gang.

Woodward is believed to be in hiding near this city and aid of the police was asked today when fliers containing the fugitive's description and offering $1,000 reward were sent to all station houses.

Country-wide Dragnet.

For five years federal agents and the police of all large cities have been seeking Woodward, who they assert, has been kept in hiding by a notorious gang of which "Cap" Don Collins was the head. Collins was recently brought back from France and is now serving a sentence in a New York prison. Woodward, detectives assert, was one of Collins' principal lieutenants.

Woodward disappeared, but more than a score of his associates have been arrested, brought back to Atlanta and punished for their part in various details, which it is asserted brought him their not less than one million dollars. Their victims ranged from an old Confederate veteran, who lost his last cent, to prominent bankers and manufacturers in Pennsylvania, Ohio and other states, who contributed small fortunes.

In addition to the bungo offenses Woodward is wanted in charge of murder in connection with the death of Ed Mills, a fellow gambler, and said to have been Woodward's associate.

Mills Is Killed.

Mills was killed by Woodward in a downtown Atlanta hotel, and the state contends was the result of a difference over division of spoils in a successful holdup.

A coroner's inquest was held to determine the cause of death.

Atlanta authorities, up to date, have received no notice of the Woodward development in the case, but they attribute this to the fact that they have left the Woodward chase largely in the hands of federal officers.

Philadelphia Story.

The Philadelphia dispatch says:

Philadelphia, Pa., August 2.—(Special)—Through arrests in this city of a band of alleged confidence men, secret service agents and postal inspectors have picked up the trail of the fugitives.

Woodward to Mexico.

Woodward went to Mexico, where he is said to have been hidden by Collins. Later, things became too hot for Collins in New York and he was forced to become a fugitive himself.

Collins chartered a yacht and engaged a crew of four gamblers and Woodward shipped on this boat.

It was the zealous efforts of secret service agents to capture Woodward that led to the abandonment of the yacht here three years ago and the subsequent flight of Collins and Woodward, along with an attractive young woman who had been a maid to the fugitives.

The disguised vessel was found to contain a large supply of liquors, which Collins and Woodward were unable to smuggle ashore.

Collins was finally forced to fly to France, where he remained a fugitive until his capture six months ago.

Collins was finally forced to fly to France, where he remained a fugitive until his capture six months ago.

Go to Mexico.

Woodward went to Mexico, where he is said to have been hidden by Collins. Later, things became too hot for Collins in New York and he was forced to become a fugitive himself.

Collins chartered a yacht and engaged a crew of four gamblers and Woodward shipped on this boat.

It was the zealous efforts of secret service agents to capture Woodward that led to the abandonment of the yacht here three years ago and the subsequent flight of Collins and Woodward, along with an attractive young woman who had been a maid to the fugitives.

The disguised vessel was found to contain a large supply of liquors, which Collins and Woodward were unable to smuggle ashore.

U.S. SUES TO CANCEL ELK HILLS LEASE

Los Angeles, August 2.—Suit for cancellation of a government lease of oil lands in naval reserve number 1, Elk Hills, Kern county, was filed by the United States attorney's office to-day in federal court against the Bell Ridge Oil company, of Los Angeles. The lease was made April 1, 1922, to the Bell Ridge company by F. C. Finney, former assistant secretary of the interior, under the administration of Albert B. Fall.

The lease involves 142,166 acres valued in excess of $4,000,000.

The suit charges that the lease was given in violation of the law, and it was never awarded before being ex-ecuted and it was awarded without competitive bidding.

The government seeks an injunction restraining the Bell Ridge company from taking more oil from the property and appointment of a receiver pending a hearing of the case. The suit is similar to one instituted here a year ago against the Pan-American Petroleum company.

Former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick is opposing U. S. Senator William J. Harris in his race for re-election to the United States senate.

E. E. Land, of Macon, is opposing Dr. N. H. Ballance, for re-election as state superintendent of schools.

George F. Hunnicut, of Hapeville, is opposing J. J. Brown for re-election as commissioner of agriculture.

A. J. Woodruff, of DeKalb county, is opposing James D. Price for re-election as a member of the public service commission.

O. R. Beaman, of Dodge county, is opposing John T. Boileau for re-election to the public service commission.

Without Opposition.

Outside of these, no state house official is meeting with any opposition in his race for reelection and every prospect is for a state-wide primary which will be the quietest Georgia has ever known.

Edward E. Eason, representative from Tattnall county in the lower house of the general assembly, is one of the best known political figures in the state and has served in both houses of the legislature for half a dozen terms. He has been leader in school legislation for many years and has vigorously advocated a reform in the state tax laws, advocating a system of taxation modeled on the North Carolina plan for this state.

Health Restored By Radium

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health-giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and diseases.

Degen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radioactive energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissue. It creates a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of the blood which is the real cause of most diseases.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you rent if it fails to give you relief. If you are suffering from any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try our appliance at no risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 102 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.—(adv.)

Leopold said, according to the doctor, enough to make him die.

In a letter to a fellow prisoner made public today, Leopold wrote:

"You may be interested to know that in the event that I am sentenced to death upon the gallows (as appears quite likely), I shall take steps to have my heart pierced with a sharp knife and my body quartered so that my spirit may be free to go to heaven after death." Dr. White said Leopold did not believe in spiritualism but said he expected to try to solve the riddle if they could be solved.

Atlanta will be host to the 1925 convention of International Cut Stone Contractors and Quarrymen's Association, Inc., according to announcement received Saturday at the Atlanta convention bureau. This city was selected at a meeting of the executive committee of the association, held last week in Chicago, and the convention will be held some time in the latter part of January or first of February. It will bring to Atlanta some 1,500 visitors from all parts of the United States and Canada, according to John Russell, assistant secretary of the bureau.

Stone mountain was one of the drawing cards for the quarrymen, according to Mr. Russell, who stated that many members of the association had written the local bureau inquiring about the great memorial being carved on Stone mountain and expressing a desire to see this world wonder. A visit to the mountain will be one of the social features of the convention.

S. C. Doby, of the Capital Stone Company, is in charge of the local committee on arrangements for the 1925 meeting. He will have associated with him several of the leading stone contractors in this city. D. D. Bell, Atlanta, expects to see to it that Atlanta lives up to her reputation for hospitality when the stone cutters gather here.

Walter W. Dryer, Chicago, is the international president of the organization. The executive committee which selected Atlanta for next year's meeting composed of the following: Charles G. Fanning, Cicero, Ill.; chairman; John Davidson, Harrison, N. J.; Walter G. Elmer, Chicago; Arthur Michie, Bedford, Ind.; J. M. Scott, Toronto; W. W. Walters, Cleveland; E. C. Williams, Boston; A. V. Jones, Minneapolis; Martin Simons, Kansas City; D. Y. Johnson, Nashville; Alexander Thompson, Cambridge, and J. M. Avery, Detroit.

D. Y. Johnson, of Nashville, is governor of the tenth district of the organization in which Georgia and Atlanta are located. Mr. Johnson has been one of the strongest supporters of the effort of the convention bureau to secure the next meeting for Atlanta. Atlanta won out over New York, Atlantic City, Detroit and Montreal, all of which were eager to entertain the 1925 convention.

GIANT TURNIP

New Specimen Measures
Three Feet.

The age of giants may be over for human beings, but it is just beginning for fruits and vegetables. Following right behind here of peaches weighing 15 ounces each, along comes a turnip from Bill Ridge, whose three feet in circumference and bearing leaves two and a half feet high. This turnip, which arrived in Atlanta Saturday, is not a freak. It is a representative specimen of a variety known as Purple Tops, being grown in north Georgia by N. S. Burton. Verily, it is the king of its race.

HAPEVILLE BAPTISTS
OBSERVE 'DOLLAR DAY'

In order to raise additional funds for their building program, members of the First Baptist church of Hapeville have designated today as "Dollar day." Proceeds of the benefit are expected to provide for completion of the new Sunday school plant, and for the purchase of seats for the main auditorium.

Members of the congregation are enthusiastic over the progress being made by the church under the leadership of Dr. S. J. W. Graham, pastor. Since January 1 of this year, 117 new members have been obtained, making the membership one of the largest in the district association.

SAUMLERS WILL VISIT
MOTHER IN GERMANY

Sig Samuel, manager of the Metropolitan theater, will sail for Germany this month to visit his mother in Berlin on her 80th birthday. Samuel will take several hundred feet of film with him, showing his home and surroundings and his mother's relatives in Atlanta. His last trip to Germany was made in 1911.

NEW ORGAN IS READY

PLAN TO COMPLETE MERCER BOWL MARCH 1

Marion, Ga., August 2.—(Special) Completion of the $100,000 concrete athletic stadium to be erected on the Mercer university campus near the present site of Alumni field will probably not be brought about until March 1, 1925, according to a statement issued here by M. S. Roberts engineer in charge of the erection program.

Plans will be submitted to the stadium committee of the city council by August 5, Mr. Roberts stated. After this, 20 days will elapse for advertising of the contracts and 10 more days will expire before the actual work will begin. Mr. Roberts, of the Flanders, Fife & Co. engineering firm of Nashville, Tenn., superintended the erection of the Vanderbilt university bowl and that of Hendrix college, of Arkansas.

No changes in the previous plans will be made, it was said. The bowl will be 100 feet in diameter and will be set in a natural depression between the hillsides near Mercer's present field. Its seating capacity is to be 15,000, a portion of the concrete stands to be covered. A football field, basketball, diamond, and tennis will be located inside the enclosure. It's large number of entrances will require the opening of several new streets in this end of Macon.

INFANT MORTALITY PROBE INSTITUTED

tained a systematic child health service, Dr. Duvall said. Public health nurses, employed by the city, are assigned to all maternity cases where the father is unable to provide private nurses. Mothers are instructed in care of their babies and themselves and supervision is maintained over the health of the infant from birth until the child enters school, where it has further supervision which continues as long as it remains in school.

Figures Are Questioned.

Figures on infant mortality issued during the week by the American Child Health association, giving the death rate for all cities of 10,000 population during 1923, which have been declared inaccurate as far as Atlanta is up to date, are as follows:

Albany, 81; Athens, 84; Atlanta, 134; Augusta, 108; Brunswick, 76; Columbus, 102; Rome, 123; Savannah, 136; Valdosta, 118, and Waycross, 91.

company are planning to accompany the offices to their new location. Negotiations are now in progress with a local transfer company to move about 200 employees and their families from Macon, it is stated.

The Georgia Casualty is one of the leading insurance companies in the state, being the largest company of its kind incorporated in Georgia. It handles all kinds of casualty policies, and maintains branches in nearly every state in the country.

BUSINESS ADVANTAGE SEEN IN MOVE

Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special) Plans are being worked out for the new general offices of the Georgia Casualty company from Macon to Atlanta, an announcement of which was made some time ago. The removal will take place in October. The home office of the company will remain in Macon.

President W. E. Small, in a statement explaining the reason for the decision to remove the general offices to the new capital said, "We are convinced the business reasons controlling the move are sound in every aspect and it means a greater casualty company for Georgia and the south."

Officers of the company are: W. E. Small, president; Judge Will Gandy, president and assistant to the president; Dr. J. C. McAfee, vice-president; E. P. Amerine, secretary; J. C. Morton, treasurer; G. A. Heide, assistant treasurer; W. B. Burch, general counsel.

HAVING sold transportation during our entire business career, dating back to long before the automobile appeared, our observation and experience lead us to believe that the trend in the automobile market is distinctively towards the small, economical car. Many a man or family are driving large, heavy and expensive cars whose income would be better conserved by using a light automobile.

After a careful investigation extending over a considerable period of time, we are convinced that the Chevrolet is the car best adapted to fill this need. We believe that the low initial purchase price, and the low upkeep cost places the Chevrolet in such a position that even those with moderate incomes can well afford to invest in Chevrolet transportation.

Beginning at once, we will handle this well-known motor car in Atlanta and vicinity.

John Smith Company

190-196 W. Peachtree

Established 1869

Preparations are under way by the executive committee of the Southeastern Fair association, headed by Oscar Mills, president, and R. M. Striplin, secretary, to present a new and more entertaining program in front of the grandstand for fair fans this year.

In addition to auto races and other hippodrome attractions, new midway shows, etc., during each and every afternoon from October 4 to 11, a new departure will be made in the manner and scope of night entertainments.

"The Atlanta Passing Revue," featuring a "brigade of feminine loveliness and finery," as Mr. Striplin styled it, will be the principal attraction, each night of the Southeastern Fair this season, blending off into the mammoth fireworks spectacle for the finale.

The "Passing Revue" will be a superproduction, coordinating color, beauty and magnificence of feminine forms in many and varied displays, supported by appropriate lighting effects and musical scores by a crack symphony band, engaged especially for this production. A water spectacle will be worked in with a bevy of diving girls and will present an unusual beach and bathing scene.

The finale of the "revue" will call for the presentation of the Georgia beauty ballet, the personnel of which will be made up of the many Georgia beauties who will be sent here from all over the state as representatives of their respective cities and towns. "Miss Macomber," "Miss Columbus," "Miss Dalton," "Miss Savannah" and a host of others will comprise this ballet and will be specially trained to participate in it. They will also compete with "Miss Atlanta Fair," who will be named at the fair, for the title of "Miss Georgia" on the last night in front of the grandstand.

Senator Stanley Has Good Margin In Kentucky Race

Louisville, Ky., August 2.—(By the Associated Press)—Unofficial returns from 96 of Kentucky's 120 counties at 11 o'clock tonight gave United States Senator A. O. Stanley a lead of 8,579 votes over John Junior Howes of Carrollton, his opponent in today's state-wide primary for democratic nomination to the senate, the Louisville Courier-Journal says.

Senator Stanley's total was given as 57,702, and Howes' as 49,123. The republican candidates for senatorial nomination had received from the same counties totals of 23,768 for Fred M. Sackett, of Louisville, and 11,058 for B. J. Betherum of Lexington.

Further returns from the tenth district, still falling considerably short of complete tallies, increased the lead of Congressman John W. Langley, of Pikeville. These figures will not be greatly changed by later information, the newspaper said in its dispatches indicated.

All congressmen seeking re-election apparently were resting on majorities or pluralities safe enough to make nomination probable, the Courier-Journal said.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT ANNUAL FAIR

The Georgia Sunday School association will have an exhibit at the Southeastern fair, to be held October 4-11, according to R. D. Webb, superintendent. The exhibit will include the work done at the Vacation Bible schools held throughout the state during the summer months.

The display will contain material from all departments of the schools, from cradle roll to adult division, and will include best original cradle roll chart, best work books in the beginners, primaries, juniors and young people's divisions; best posters from each of the divisions, best maps, the best invitations and the best stationery and the best posters on any subject for advertising club from adult division. From the Vacation Bible schools will be the best drawn maps, the best relief maps, the best pieces of craft work by boys and by girls, the best pieces of basketry, the best clay modeling and the best advertising posters or cards.

FINAL SERVICES FOR MRS. MIKELL SET FOR MONDAY

Last services for Mrs. Lucy T. Mikell, who died Thursday at her home in the Delta Manta apartment, Piedmont, will be held at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon from All Saints Episcopal church, with her brother-in-law, Bishop H. J. Mikell, of the Atlanta diocese, officiating. Interment will be in West View, with H. J. Mikell as Chaplain. She had resided in Atlanta for the past 30 years, and was prominent in church and social circles here. She was the wife of F. M. Mikell, assistant manager of the southern branch of the Royal Insurance company.

Applications for benefits under the bonus law are being received at the rate of 20,000 a day by the war department and 2,000 a day at the navy department.

Georgia Growers Prepare To Market Record Tobacco Crop

Waycross, Ga., August 2.—(Special)—Warehouses at Blackshear, the tobacco market for this section, are confident that 9,000,000 pounds will be marketed there this season. Last season Morgan's warehouse handled 1,262,603 pounds and the Farmers' warehouse 1,382,564 pounds, making a total of 3,309,467 pounds.

This estimate means a gain of over 200 per cent. Tobacco demonstrators have reported the number of acres and the approximate poundage cured in their territory. The warehousemen have canvassed the section to find out how much has been cured and to collect the crop has now been made and cured and therefore reliance is placed on this estimate.

Price Is Question.

The main interest is what will be the price this season. Reports come in that the crop in the Carolinas is short, that other sections in Georgia have suffered from heavy rains and it is believed that the price will be equal last year's with a slight possibility of an increase.

Every demonstrator reports enthusiastically on the quality. They do not hesitate to say that this is the best tobacco in Georgia. Allowing for enthusiasm, farmers have hopes of good prices.

The average price last year was over 27 cents a pound. If that price is maintained this season farmers are going to make handsome profits.

A third warehouse has been built in Blackshear. Blackshear now has the Morgan warehouse, 1,000,000 feet; Farmers' warehouse, 1,262,603 feet; the Ashley & Chambers warehouse, 80,000 feet. This gives a total floor space of 77,740 square feet, a space adequate to accommodate the 9,000,000 pounds.

FITZGERALD TO SELL 2,000,000-POUND CROP.

Fitzgerald, Ga., August 2.—(Special)—Several thousand invitations have been sent farmers and tobacco growers in this territory to attend the opening of the Peach Exchange here Wednesday. The chamber of commerce, the Merchants' association and Kiwanis are cooperating with the Fitzgerald Tobacco Warehouse company in preparing a barbecue and other entertainment for the opening day.

The chamber of commerce has also arranged to pay a daily premium of $10 to the farmer who brings to this market the best offering of tobacco and receives the highest price on each day's sale.

Men, Farmers' and Smith, of Rocky Mount, N. C., will operate the old warehouse at Hahira, while J. E. Ohara, of Covington, Ky., will be in charge of the new one.

TIPTON MARKET OPENS WEDNESDAY.

Tifton, Ga., August 2.—(Special) A large airplane circled over southwest Georgia this afternoon distributing advertising matter for the Tifton tobacco market.

The tobacco market here opens Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and Tifton's two warehouses, with 100,000 square feet of floor space, are expected to be filled to capacity.

Predictions are for higher prices than last season.

VIDALIA MARKET READY TO OPEN.

Vidalia, Ga., August 2.—Although the Vidalia market is not scheduled to open until August 6, growers who will market at this place have been hauling their loose leaf to the warehouses all week and placing it on the floor to be assured of space on the opening day.

There is enough tobacco already delivered to the warehouse to make the biggest break ever held in Vidalia, and it is now thought by the managers of the warehouse that two or three sales may be necessary on the opening day in order to dispose of all the offerings.

In Toombs county alone the tobacco acreage this season has increased to 1,500 acres more than last year's acreage of 150, and crops from this acreage have in large measure been gathered and cured, the grade being the best that has yet been gathered in this section since tobacco-growing was started in commercial quantities.

SNUGGLING STENOS WERE NOT WANTED BY THIS EMPLOYER

New York, August 2.—To be sure that your steno isn't a "snugger" test her before hiring her—but don't get caught.

That's the philosophy of William Whittle, president of the American Music Publishing company, as he faced a court sentence.

When Miss Dorothy Walter, 16, applied for a job, Whittle held her hand. Dorothy walked out of the room and told her mother, Whittle was arrested.

"Your honor, before I hire a girl I always test her morals," Whittle told the judge. "I put my arms around her and be a bit free. If they do not resent, I know they are used to it and not the kind I want in my office."

He was remanded without bail for further hearing August 6.

PEACH EXCHANGE APPEALS TO LAW

also asked for damages against the growers for breach of contract.

The crops were made out that the growers broke their contracts when they sold fruit that did not go through the exchange. A similar case against the Duke Brothers, of Fort Valley, was continued until August 16.

Directors Meet Monday.

Whether growers' contracts will be terminated or not remains to be seen. There will be a meeting of the board of directors of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange here on Monday, at which the situation will be threshed out. That it will be a stormy session was indicated tonight, when it became known that one director, Fred J. Bryon, will offer a motion to dissolve the exchange and liquidate as soon as possible.

Some of the growers have expressed the opinion during the paroxysm period through which they have passed that they could have marketed the crop themselves at more favorable prices than were obtained through the exchange.

Benton Speaks.

Along this line, J. L. Benton, president of the exchange, today said that the growers wanted to vent their anger and naturally couldn't find anything but the exchange to turn loose on.

"Nature is to be blamed for our overproduction this year," said Mr. Benton. "Overproduction, the fact the crop ripened over a shorter period than ever known in the history of the industry, caused our trouble. The market could not consume the crop."

"While some growers have been a little hot-headed, there is a better feeling now. Some of the growers who have tried to break contracts have come in today and stated that they were wrong and we were right."

Market Flooded.

J. G. Carlisle, general manager of the exchange, dug up records of shipments of peaches this year and compared the results with the shipments of other years to support the same theory advanced by Mr. Benton.

"Including July 31," said Mr. Carlisle, "we marketed 12,143 cars of Georgia peaches this year. Up to the first of July only 1,722 cars had been shipped, leaving a total of 10,371 cars shipped up to the first of July."

"During the first week in July, there were 487 cars shipped, deduced that from the total July shipments of 10,371 and we have 9,884 cars that were marketed in 21 days, an average of 471 cars a day."

Cars Thrown Away.

"If it had not been for the exchange in insisting that the growers throw away thousands of cars of peaches, and not ship them, we would have had the greatest distribution for the fruit ever known, growers would have been much worse off than they are today. Overproduction was the cause of our trouble."

"Take the year of 1921, the biggest peach crop up to this year, and we find that 1,402 cars were shipped in July, 1,650 cars shipped in July, 564 cars shipped in July, and 11 cars in August, a total of 10,636 cars. Had our crop this year ripened the same way as the crop of 1921, markets would have had more time in which to absorb the peaches. Georgia's production of peaches this year was higher than has been estimated."

"There is no way of telling how many peaches were thrown away, but it amounts to thousands of cars."

IF BILIOUS, SICK!

TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knock-out. Your head is dull, all your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick! That's the way to get rid of it. Take Dodson's Liver Tone.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into your bile, like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and vomiting. Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children.

more than 4,000 acres planted within a marketable distance of the Hahira market.

Hahira farmers are pioneers in the cultivation of the weed and have made it profitable. Twenty demonstrators, all plain, practical farmers, who learned the culture of the crop on their own farms, have been sent out to the Hahira board of trade to interest in cultivation of the crop during 1924.

Competitive Market.

The demonstrators have without exception succeeded, and the crop in 25 counties is reported as fine. Warehouses at Hahira will be under separate management, with individual buyers and auctioneers. This will create at Hahira a competitive tobacco market, which is accepted as being the best good prices.

Men, Farmers' and Smith, of Rocky Mount, N. C., will operate the old warehouse at Hahira, while J. E. Ohara, of Covington, Ky., will be in charge of the new one.

TIPTON MARKET OPENS WEDNESDAY.

Tifton, Ga., August 2.—(Special) A large airplane circled over southwest Georgia this afternoon distributing advertising matter for the Tifton tobacco market.

The tobacco market here opens Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and Tifton's two warehouses, with 100,000 square feet of floor space, are expected to be filled to capacity.

Predictions are for higher prices than last season.

VIDALIA MARKET READY TO OPEN.

Vidalia, Ga., August 2.—Although the Vidalia market is not scheduled to open until August 6, growers who will market at this place have been hauling their loose leaf to the warehouses all week and placing it on the floor to be assured of space on the opening day.

There is enough tobacco already delivered to the warehouse to make the biggest break ever held in Vidalia, and it is now thought by the managers of the warehouse that two or three sales may be necessary on the opening day in order to dispose of all the offerings.

In Toombs county alone the tobacco acreage this season has increased to 1,500 acres more than last year's acreage of 150, and crops from this acreage have in large measure been gathered and cured, the grade being the best that has yet been gathered in this section since tobacco-growing was started in commercial quantities.

papers characterize as "a mad attempt to coerce Ulster." The second is that the premier of Ulster, Sir James Craig, will be forced by illness to resign his post. This rumor is given a semi-official denial, but it is pointed out that replacing Sir James by a new premier who currently was jealous of the other. He testified that he had been told that the single woman had threatened the other girl's life unless she (the married woman) let Thaxton alone.

Mr. Shedd, speaking on the floor of the house Friday, illustrated his argument by referring to the list of bills which the rules committee has placed on the special order of business. The bill in importance of the hundreds not yet passed upon. Mr. Shedd referred to these bills, which, he said, will regulate court costs in justice of the peace courts, and gave it as his opinion that the great majority of the people did not "give a tinker's damn" whether the bill ever passed or not.

When he had convened Monday morning it will have before it for the first two orders of business.

One is the resolution by Representative Wimberly, of Toombs, to investigate the public service commission.

Debate on this resolution has been limited to 30 minutes, 15 minutes to the side.

The other is a special order, introduced by the rules committee to follow disposal of the biennial sessions bill and the Wimberly resolution. Which will be taken up first is unknown.

Quiet in Senate.

In the senate, the only matter pending is the adjournment, only ten days off, the Georgia bill on capital punishment.

It is a special order, and at present it appears that there will be no necessity for carrying over any unfinished business until the 25th session.

Nearly 20 Miles of Sewers To Be Completed This Year

Nearly 20 miles of sewers, costing $500,000, are to be completed this year to carry out in every detail the 1921 bond issue program which was started last year with construction of 16 miles of sewers at a cost of $450,000. It was announced Saturday by Alderman Claude E. Buchanan, chairman of the sewer committee of city council, who has supervised personally the most extensive sewer improvement program ever attempted in Atlanta.

Engineering exercised in construction of the main projects of the bond issue program has enabled the city and bond commission to divert nearly $100,000 of savings from them into construction of lateral sewers, leading from the main sewers along important streets to connect with thousands of new homes that have been built in Atlanta since the extension program began, Alderman Buchanan's report showed.

Sewer Importance Stressed.

The vital importance of a well planned sewer system to the big city was stressed by Alderman Buchanan in making public the report on construction.

Rain water, which has fallen to a total of more than two feet deep already this year in Atlanta, cannot sink into the earth or follow natural channels of outlet, because either roofs or pavements, paved or unpaved, most of the surface area of the city and artificial changes in street and building lot levels prevent natural flow. Artificial outlets must be provided for that as for the waste that is created by a population of 250,000.

Of the $500,000 which will be spent on sewers, approximately $55,000 will come from the sale of the sewer bonds under the 1921 bond issue; $100,000 will be spent in the construction of lateral sewers; $50,000 will be spent on special appropriations, including 17 projects. Practically all of the sewers for which special appropriations were made by council at the beginning of the year are now under construction, or have been completed. Nineteen miles have been paved up for lateral sewers so far this year, 43 of which have been completed.

All Under Construction.

All of the bond issue sewer projects outlined for the year's work are now under construction, and it is hoped to have them all completed by the first of the year, with the possible exception of the Lloyd Street trunk sewer, which is the largest single sewer job that has been undertaken by the city.

The sewer department is now laying house connections for all streets passed up for new pavement, which are more than 100 in number.

The Orange Grove sewers were completed the first of this year. This was extended from Fourteenth street north 2,400 feet and cost about $12,000. It is one of the largest in the city and takes care of all the territory north of Marietta street and west of Georgia railroad.

McDaniel Street Sewer.

The McDaniel street trunk sewer, under construction, will extend from University Avenue to the Atlanta & West Point belt railroad.

Trunk sewers are being built to provide sewerage for the Brownsville section, which lies in and around Clark university, and is at present without any sewer facilities.

A relief sewer is being constructed on the open channel in Piedmont park to Eleventh street near Piedmont avenue, to relieve this section, which is badly clogged in rains.

The Greensboro avenue trunk sewer has been completed from Parsons street to 10th street, and of West Hunter street. This sewer, close up, is a sewer branch on the site of one of the new high schools. The Boynton street sewer, as well as the Grant park trunk line, has been completed, closing up two very bad and offensive sewer patches in the Third and Second wards, as well as the stockade trunk sewer.

Storm Water Outlets.

Several storm water sewers have been completed, including the North Boulevard park storm water sewer; West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets' relief sewer; Myrtle and Peachtree; and Johnson and Gordon streets' storm water sewers; St. Charles avenue and Barnett street storm water sewers, and the Pennsylvania avenue, Los Angeles avenue and Maryland

NICARAGUA PLANS AIR MAIL SERVICE

South Carolina has just passed the biennial bill.

"During the last twelve years Georgia has had three extra sessions, in 1915, 1917 and 1923. During the past twelve years the four two biennial states have only had extra sessions as follows: Five have had none; twelve have had one; eleven have had two; three have had three; nine have had from three to five. It may be observed that twenty-eight of the four two biennial states have had less or no greater number of extra sessions than Georgia. A large percentage of these few extra sessions were for one or two days only—some of them to pass on the eighteenth and nineteenth amendments to the federal constitution; others for local matters. Alabama's biennial sessions from 1876 to 1902, however, were about 26 years, and had no extra sessions.

"Georgia had biennial sessions from 1877 to 1892, a period of 15 years. At that time there was only one extra session in 1882, for two days. During that time, however, there were adjourned sessions. Under the pres-

PATRIOTIC BODIES BACK DEFENSE DAY

Washington, August 2.—Assurance of cooperation with the government in the holding of the national "defense test" on September 17 in more than a score of patriotic associations is given in the letter department of the Atlanta Journal.

Senator Reed declared that preparedness is a relative term and points to a condition which constitutes complete preparedness against a small power, but gross unpreparedness against a great power or combination of great powers.

No Record of Aggression.

"For more than 50 years," his letter continued, "the United States has granted all local business to the railroads, street car, telephone, bank, electric railroad, insurance, telegraph, telephone, steamboat, canal, and navigation company charters. All of these matters are now handled by the superior courts secretary of state and other departments and not by the legislature. It took a great deal of time to incorporate the various companies as shown in the following records:

"1875-1879, 33 charters were granted; 1881-1885, 63 were granted; 1884-1888, 63 were granted; 1889, 189 charters were granted, including amendments; 1890-91, 132 were granted; in 1897, 129 were granted.

"It is plain, therefore, that the possession of this power has never led to a policy of aggression.

"The claim that by placing ourselfs in a position where attack will certainly be repelled, we thereby invite attack, borders on the idiocy. It serves itself."

ent law there can be no adjournment of the legislature. The legislative session is limited by law to fifty days, and there can be no adjournment.

"It is claimed that using the biennial period from 1897 to 1892, we have never adjourned sessions. This is true, but at that time thirty-old judges of the superior court and two United States senators were elected.

"The program may be as full of errors as an egg is of meat, but the only object of this experiment is to discuss these errors in advance, instead of waiting to learn them on fields strewn thick with the corpses of American boys."

Senator Reed declared that preparedness is a relative term and points to a condition which constitutes complete preparedness against a small power, but gross unpreparedness against a great power or combination of great powers.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Conduct of U. S. Realtors Outlined in Ethics Code

Pointing to the code of ethics adopted at the last convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, as a most important business document, requests were made of the editor of the Real Estate Review that it be presented to the readers of this page. The preamble and Part I of the code was published in the issue of Sunday, July 27, and Part II is presented below.

The code of ethics of the national real estate board was adopted at the annual convention held in June of 1923. Its purpose, it is pointed out, was to guide the members of the various municipal and state boards in their transactions and relations with each other as well as the public. The document is in line with efforts that have been made by the organized real estate profession for general improvement in the standard of its membership and to purge its roster of men whose business integrity and personal character are not in keeping with the high class profession of dealing in real property.

Part II. of the National Real Estate Board's code of ethics is printed in full below. The code of ethics, consisting of Part III and addenda, will appear in The Constitution's Real Estate Review of Sunday, August 10.

PART II.

Relations to Clients.

Article 12.—In justice to those who place their interests in his hands, the realtor should endeavor his best to be informed regarding the law, proposed legislation and other essential facts and public policies which affect those interests.

Article 13.—In accepting the agency for property, the realtor pledges himself to be fair to purchaser or tenant, as well as to the owner whom he represents and whose interests he should protect and promote as he should his own.

Article 14.—A realtor should not buy for himself property listed with him, nor should he acquire any interest therein, without first making his true position clearly known to the listing owner.

Article 15.—When asked for an appraisal of real property or an opinion as to its value, the realtor should never give an unconsidered answer; his counsel constitutes a professional service which he should render only after having ascertained and weighed the facts, and for which he should make a fair charge.

Article 16.—The realtor should endeavor the naming of the actual or an obvious nominal consideration in a deed.

Article 17.—When acting as agent in the management of property, the realtor should not accept any commission, rebate or profit on expenditures made for the owner, without his full knowledge and consent.

Article 18.—The exclusive listing of property should be urged and practiced by the realtor as a means of eliminating misunderstanding and dissensions and assuring better service to the owner.

Article 19.—The acceptance by a realtor of an exclusive listing imposes the obligation of rendering skilled and conscientious service; when a realtor is unable to render such services either himself or with the aid of his fellow realtors, he should not accept the listing.

Article 20.—Before offering a property listed with him by the owner, it is the realtor's duty to advise the owner honestly and intelligently regarding its fair market value.

WILLIAMS WINS
RENTING CONTEST.

M. G. Williams, of the renting staff of the Grant-Jeter company, headed the list of contestants in the recent race to determine which member of the force could close the greatest number of apartment-lease contracts. The contest, it was stated, was spirited throughout and Mr. Williams won by a close but decided margin. His friends have offered him congratulations upon his success.

GALLOWAY RETURNS FROM FLORIDA.

Miles Galloway, formerly with Galloway Bros. and other well-known realty firms of Atlanta, returned last week from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he spent several months casting about for a business location that would at least equal Atlanta. This, however, he failed to find, upon which this failure to improve upon the "Gate City of the South" by remaining and taking up duties with Evans & Dodd, one of the most important realty houses in the city. Mr. Galloway occupies a position on the sales staff of the Evans & Dodd company, which has been welcomed back to Atlanta by many friends and business associates.

TREADWELL ENJOYS
ST. SIMON'S VACATION.

Ben Treadwell, one of Atlanta's best-known real estate men, is enjoying a summer vacation on the beach at St. Simon's Island. Mr. Treadwell is one of a large number of "real estaters" who add to the population of the big Atlanta colony at this highly popular resort.

CHAPMAN AND FAMILY RETURN.

E. M. Chapman, Jr., of the Adair Realty & Trust company, closed his summer vacation the first of the past week, returning with his family from St. Simon's Island. Mr. Thompson is one of a large number of "real estaters" who add to the population of the big Atlanta colony at this highly popular resort.

HURST GOES TO FLORIDA POSITION.

Harris Hurst, well known to members of the local real estate field as sales manager of the Calhoun agency, has resigned his position with Calhoun to take up new duties with a real estate firm in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mr. Hurst has just returned to Atlanta from a preliminary visit to a new home, accompanied by Virgil C. Almond, former colleague, but at present a member of the Florida realty firm with which Mr. Hurst will be connected.

Mr. Hurst has a wide circle of friends in the real estate and business world of Atlanta, and many well wishes have been extended to him by those who learned of his intention to remove from this city to a new field of endeavor.

GALLOWAY SPENDING
WHILE IN FLORIDA.

Clarence Galloway, well-known real estate man, of Atlanta, and former member of a musical quartet that was heard by thousands of Atlanta people, is on a visit to St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Galloway is accompanied by his family and his stay in the "Flower State" is said to be indefinite.

THOMPSON RETURNS FROM ST. SIMON'S ISLAND.

Fain C. Thompson, popular member of the sales staff of F. P. & George J. Morris, realty house of Atlanta, has returned from a vacation trip to St. Simon's Island. Mr. Thompson is one of a large colony of Atlanta realty men enjoying themselves at this popular point on Georgia's coast. He is reported a most enjoyable trip.

BUSINESS ACTIVE WITH MORRIS CO.

"Business with our firm for the past few days," said F. P. Morris, of the well-known Atlanta realty house of F. P. & George J. Morris, "has been gratifying in every way, and all indications point to further activity with the coming autumn months." Mr. Morris called attention to the prospect for a splendid harvest in Georgia this fall, and said that all signs indicate a period of activity that is expected to smash business records.

HARRY CRIDER TO SELL
ROLAND PARK LOTS.

With a splendid selection of choice home sites to offer to his clients, Harry J. Crider, well-known Atlanta realty man, has disposed of something like 175 lots in the side of Roland Park at the corner of Hardee and South Moreland avenue. "Not only have we been very successful," said Mr. Crider, "in selling a large number of the choice residence sites in Roland Park, but we have every indication of a continuation of the demand for these building locations."

CRAIN COMPANY HAS ACTIVE WEEK.

"Our business for the past week," said Allan Crain, of the Crain Realty company, "has been exceedingly good and we are pleased to announce that we have sold a gratifying number of home sites." This popular agency, with offices in the Healey building, carries a splendid listing and a big list of clients is said to have been attracted to the firm by its well-placed classified ads, and splendid results have been obtained, according to Mr. Crain.

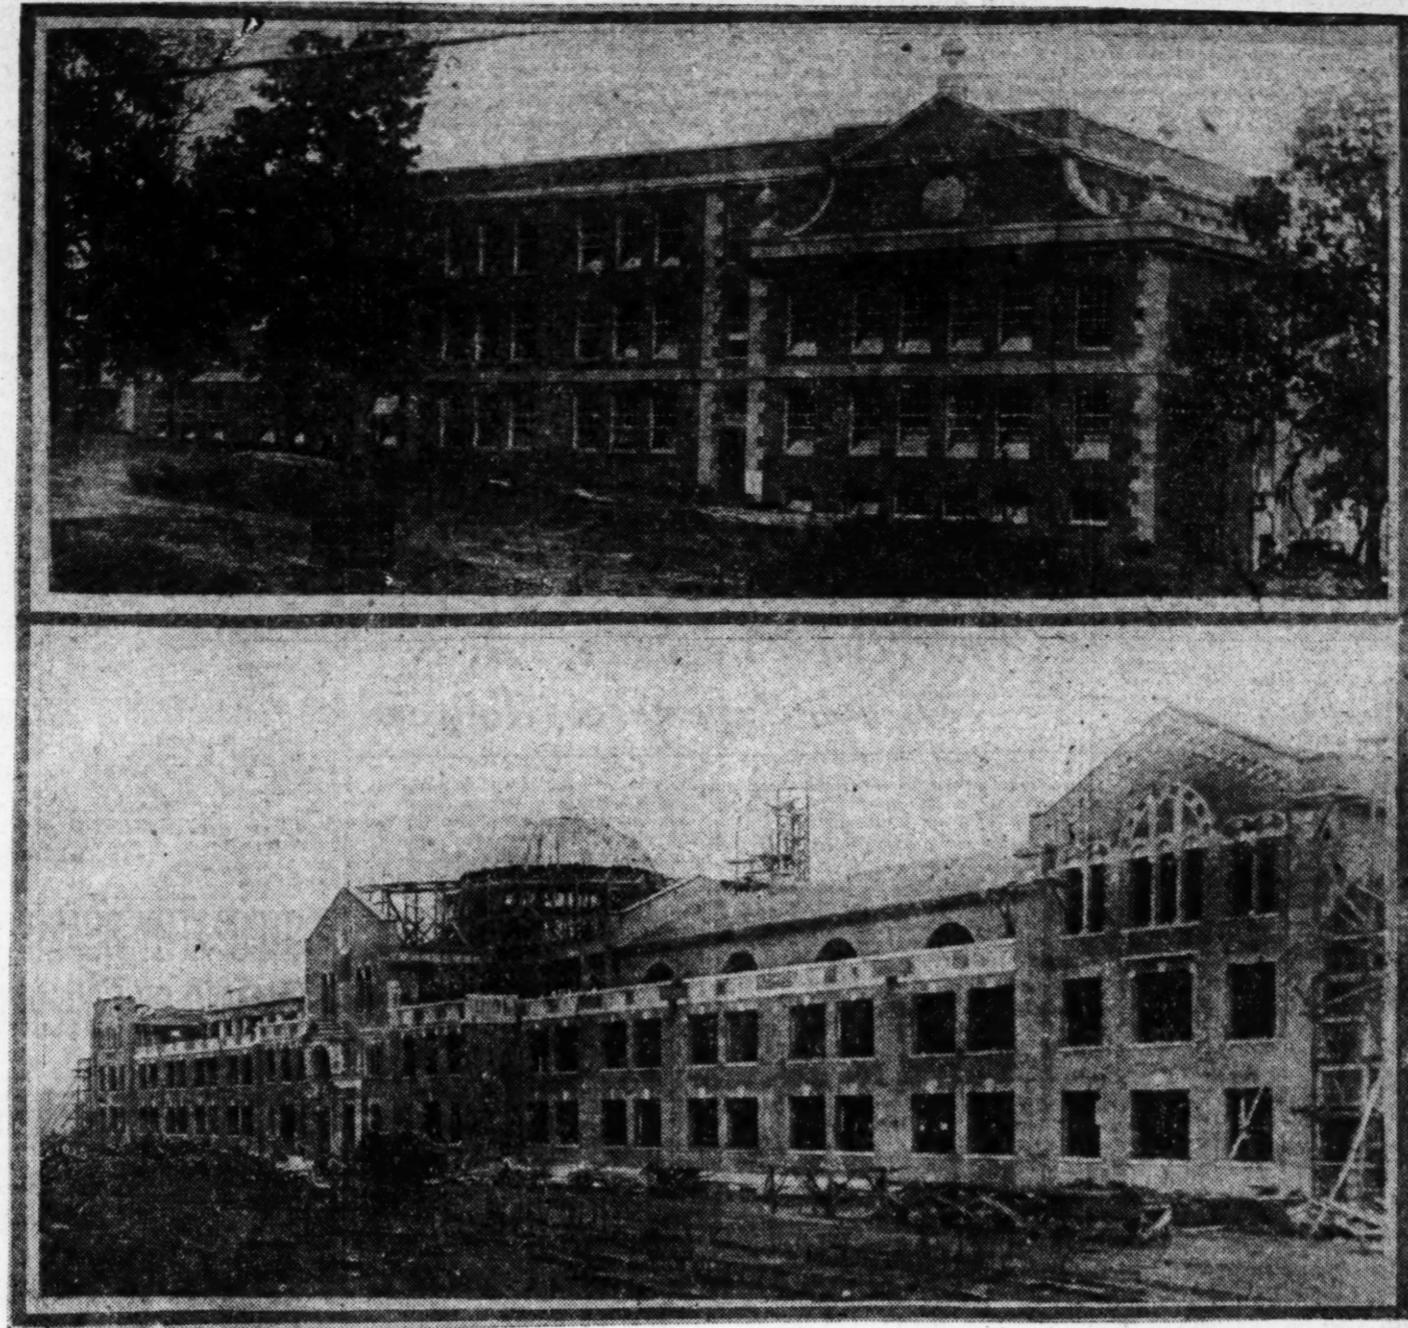

PARSONS DECLARES
APARTMENTS IN DEMAND.

"Apartments of the better type are in good demand," said J. H. Hopkins, of the Grant-Jeter sales staff, "and they are going rapidly at this season of the year. Anyone wishing to secure the most desirable apartments should act within the next few days, because they are going fast, and somebody stands to experience disappointment if they are not careful." Hopkins adds the above advice to that of many of the leading apartment house agencies of Atlanta, all of whom join in the statement that there is a most active demand for that type of dwelling here.

PARSONS FAITHFUL
BASEBALL FAN.

On the principle that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," M. C. Parsons, of the Grant-Jeter sales staff, devotes much of his leisure time to the great American game of baseball. When not teaching his son, Mr. Parsons, friends and business associates know just where to locate him during the afternoon hours, and when the Atlanta players are on some other field, it is declared that the popular real estate man can be found occupying a special seat in a pharmacy near his home "listening in" on the radio reports of the contest.

Atlanta's Handsome Senior High Schools

First pictures of the splendid senior high school plants now in course of construction in geographically opposite sides of the city. Upper view is of Boys' High, a magnificent school plant, nearly complete. This building, which will add greatly to Atlanta's ever-expanding school system, will be equipped with modern appointments of every nature. It stands on Tenth street, between Jackson street and North Boulevard. Lower view is of Girls' Senior High school, which is more than 50 per cent finished on the city's property in the third ward. This building, arranged and appointed in harmony with modern educational institutions, will be, like Boys' High, one of the finest school plants in the country. A. Ten Eych Brown, architect in charge of new school buildings, expresses himself as greatly gratified over progress made on the above buildings despite many obstacles that had to be surmounted. That the people of Atlanta will be proud of the two senior high buildings, is the opinion expressed by many prominent people who have inspected the structures.

of the past. "When the farmer profits," said another realty man, "we can look confidently for active trade in all line. Atlanta is growing and the people coming to this city looking for dwelling places naturally enliven the scene, as well as other lines of business."

LOTS ARE SELLING
FINE.—MRS. DOWE.

"You can say for me that Atlanta home sites are continuing to sell, and from every present indication the market will become more active during the coming months than at any time for the past year." This statement was made to a representative of The Constitution by Mrs. A. R. Dowe, manager of the Georgia Realty company, a new and exceedingly active Atlanta real estate agency.

"We have many fine homes here, and more during the months just closed," continued Mrs. Dowe, "and we look for a better period to come than that experienced during the past few weeks."

Mrs. Dowe has had much experience in Atlanta real estate, and is considered a good judge of market conditions.

Marion Kiser Joins Firm of Keenan-Chambers

MARIION C. KISER, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser, of Pace's Ferry road, who graduated with high honors from the University of Virginia with the class of 1924, has established a business connection with the real estate firm of Keenan &amp; Chambers, of 1113 Healey building, and will assume his new duties in the sales and lease department immediately, it was announced Friday.

Mr. Kiser, who was born in Atlanta, has graduated from Boys' High school here before beginning his college career. His record at the University of Virginia was probably without parallel, making high scholastic honors and strong fraternal connections. He is a member of the S. A. E. fraternity and an active member of the local alumni association.

Definite Results Realized Through Keenan-Chambers

TURMAN-BROWN CO.
ISSUES BOOKLET
ON APARTMENTS

"The results of our advertising campaign in The Constitution in the sale of lots in Sylvan Hills have been more than satisfactory—we have received, from actual count, five inquiries from The Constitution to one from any other advertising medium. The statement was made by S. E. Davidson, prominent real estate man, who, with J. H. Johnson, forms a selling organization to handle the many splendid home sites in Atlanta's newest and most attractive south-side residence development. Mr. Davidson not only attracted the attention of the real estate firm of Keenan & Chambers, of 1113 Healey building, and will assume his new duties in the sales and lease department immediately, it was announced Friday.

Mr. Kiser has had much experience in Atlanta real estate, and is considered a good judge of market conditions.

"Our success in the sale of Sylvan Hills lots," continued Mr. Davidson, "has been gratifying in the extreme and we are highly pleased with the manner in which our sales in The Constitution have brought results. For the first time in my connection with the real estate world I have caused a strict record to be kept of the replies and the business resulting from advertising placed in the newspapers. This record shows we have received five inquiries from Constitution advertisers to one from any other medium. It also shows that The Constitution replies to our advertising in a large percentage of instances."

Sylvan Hills Popular.
The south side development, known as Sylvan Hills, which is being sold by Messrs. Davidson and Johnson, lies just south of Capitol View, one of the most popular developments on that side of Atlanta. It has been placed in condition during the past two years, every civic betterment being installed and the subdivision being carried on by the owners in-charge of the project. Many of the handsome sites were sold before the present company took hold of the subdivision, and a number of splendid homes have been erected upon the property.

A recently inaugurated motor bus line now serves Sylvan Hills on the south side and Moreland side park on the north side of the city, is said by the company to have added greatly to the value of the lots and the attractiveness of the subdivision.

Seventeen Apartments.
The building contains 17 units, each dwelling having every luxury of arrangement and all modern conveniences. The units are in size to suit the requirements of patrons. Twelve units are equipped with outside balconies, which add greatly to their attractiveness, giving an outlook over the beautiful surroundings of that district. Plenty of closet room is being provided for the convenience of the occupants, and other innovations that is looked upon as certain to make these apartments delightful as possible.

All floors throughout the apartment are of high-class hardwood and the walls of kitchens and bathrooms are finished in oil paint. Tapestry papers form the finish of breakfast rooms, the paper being arranged in panels while oil paint is used on the wood work.

Murphy door beds are among the equipment features that add greatly to the attractiveness of this apartment. The kitchen is equipped with a built-in refrigerator and modern conveniences. The unit is said to be an additional bedroom.

All bathrooms have been installed under modern supervision, every equipment being supplied that is required to bring its appointments up to date. Modern gas ranges will be a feature of the kitchen, and the dangerous practice of striking matches.

Gasoline busses run regularly at stated intervals and they traverse the district in such manner as to give the most complete and comfortable service to this and the south side residence tract.

The dangerous practice of striking matches.

These vehicles are driven right to the curb, making it convenient to alight from and board them. They also pass directly by most of the houses in both subdivisions, giving the most convenient and direct service to the people.

These units are being offered at $1,200 per month.

This apartment is under the sole

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

America, or the Sacrifice. A romance of the American Revolution. The illustrations are scenes from D. W. Griffith's photoplay "America." Robert W. Chambers has written a story that makes the American heart experience a series of patriotic thrills, as he writes of that glorious time when America became a republic.

Probably the majority of the readers of Chambers' story have seen Griffith's wonderful presentation of "America." He has used all the color, the hardships and the struggles of those years that have given us history. There has been no decrease in the story of the gallantry of Paul Revere, of the British, of Lexington and Concord, nor of the stories of the desperate sacrifices which our ancestors made to establish our freedom—"as seen through the eyes of a brave youth who served as a scout in the Continental army and a Tory maid who loved him."

We have learned many lessons concerning these thrilling times who do not hesitate to read them again, those stirring days when the lanterns gleamed in Old North church and Paul Revere galloped through the night with his desperate warning.

Robert W. Chambers has placed Americans under obligations for the portrayal of the romantic heritage he has written. In his newest novel, America, he has, in his silent drama, "America," which was made from the Chambers' story.

There have been predictions for a long time that Robert W. Chambers was going to write something far better than what he had already written and his stories are always "best sellers." His latest novel, America, has been waiting patiently until the location of "America," a thrilling tale of the American Revolutionary period—and a book that will take its place with the best historic novels that have been published.

Besides its real historic setting based on many original documents and illustrations, by Amy L. Rife, who is instructor of home economics, University of Michigan, there's a beautiful love story of the dashing young Continental officer and the charming Tory maid, (Grosset & Dunlap, publishers, New York.)

IN A SHANTUNG GARDEN.

A Shantung Garden. By Louis J. Jordan, Mills, author of "Mr. Wu," "Miss Wu," "The Man," and other stories which have been well received.

The author tells a most interesting story of a young New Yorker who was sent on a business trip for his father's firm, to China, his orders being to "learn China in her social as well as her business life," and then to execute the mission which he had been given.

Tom Drew set sail for the land of the cherry blossoms, and it was with a pleasing mental attitude that he approached the "ancient order and intricate beauties of Chinese life and culture. Tom was a true American, he was proud of Old Glory, he did not do his best for the Chinese. Friends and could never forget the Aragon forest, he had never become sentimental and while there may have been a slight heartache over leaving Nette, he wasn't going to make himself miserable over even this, for he was going to see China in all her glory. Life is a strange thing, and falls in love with two young people in a still stronger for it on account of the dislike Tom's father had for Nette's father, that Tom had to go sailing.

And romance can also be found in China with its beautiful homes, in one especially with its Shantung garden. Tom found that the soul of true romance was in the same world over when it comes to love and loving the American girl does not leave behind the dear little maid beyond the seas. It is a most colorful romance and so cleverly written that it should prove popular among fiction readers who like a little bit of historical color for a background. (Frederick A. Stokes, New York.)

ATTRACTIVE BOOKS.

The Small Home—How to Plan and Build It. By William Brinkley, architectural editor of The Farm and the walls and the ceilings and a fine Journal, American Institute of Architects. He gives sixty practical plans for low-cost bungalows, cottages, farmhouses, apartments, garages and barns.

Mr. Brinkley discusses the subjects of the most important, the buildings that are the most essential in the building of a home: Selecting the site, counting the cost; plans and specifications; heating and fireplaces; plumbing; making over the old home, etc.

One of the most important things in the south is the porch for all purposes. As the reader knows, the English style in America was porchless, but the colonists soon found that summers under southern skies needed porches, so they began to model their homes after the style of Italy and Spain, but this was an unsuccessful experiment for the English porch was not a good substitute for shade, but for comfort and convenience, as a result of which we have in the south many kinds of porches, as follows:

Entrance porches, living porches, kitchen porches with their attractive lattice work, dining room porches in the open, sleeping room porches and sun porches, and some porches there is only one porch which serves for two or three different purposes.

"Making over the old home" is another interesting subject in which the advice of the writer is worth while. Be sure to read this chapter when you are in a company mood. It will pay.

One of the most important subjects is the plumbing—after you have dispensed with the plans and specifications.

This is a very attractive book for anyone who is planning a new home. (Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.)

INTERIOR DECORATION.

Interior Decoration for the Small Home, with many attractive illustrations. By Amy L. Rife, who is instructor of home economics, University of Michigan.

The author's chief purpose in publishing this book is for young housekeepers as well as to complicate in one volume the chief principles of art in such a simple way that it will be easy to furnish a new home.

Miss Rolfe says: "If you understand color and form, harmony and the essential relation to visual unity, you should then have sufficient confidence to express some individuality

POETRY AND DRAMA.

This Fine Pretty Thing. A comedy of the Kentucky mountains, by Percy Mackaye, who has become interested in the various phases of life of these well-known mountain districts of Kentucky. Listen to these words from the preface:

"Here we are in a rough-hewn, old cabin, the ears of the mountains. The 'oh-white' call floats up to us, the creek murmurs, the hollies hush their pink and brilliant stalks. Around, up, and far away—the hills are dusted with the chestnut bloom, which the wind brings to us as faint odors." All this and much more describes the life of this wonderful country.

This is a well-written and interesting as well as entertaining comedy of the life in the mountains of the Blue Grass state. Read it and enjoy it as you turn the pages. (The MacMillan Company, New York.)

POETRY AND DRAMA.

The Greatness of These. By Wilmette Eddy Stevens. This little book is filled with poems on religion, friendship and love. The lines are appealing and show the expression of the author's heart and soul:

"A trusting faith,
A simple creed,
A tender heart,
For those in need;
The strength to under,
The grace to wait,
A frank contempt
Of fear or fate." (The Stratford Co., Boston.)

George Washington. A drama in blank verse in four scenes. By Mrs. Belle Willy Gue, who is a profound student of early American history, and her novels and plays have been warmly received. (The Four-Season Co., Boston.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Land of All Nations. By Margaret R. Seabach, author of "Martin of Mansfield," "Missionary Milestones," etc. The book has a number of illustrations and is published jointly by Council of Women for Home Missions and Missionary Education Movement, New York City.

China's Challenge to Christianity.

By Lucius Chapin Porter, the frontispiece being a picture of Dr. Cheng Ching-Yi, chairman of the National Christian Conference held in Shanghai in May, 1922. He is one of the wise, far-seeing and creative leaders of the church of Christ in China. Missionary Education Movement of the U. S. New York.

The Function of Spirit in Matter.

By E. H. Crowson, M. A. This study was originally taken as a matter of psychological investigation. (The Stratford company, Boston.)

Religion in the Kindergarten.

A course in religion for the beginner's department in the Sunday school, or for use in the day school or home. By Bertha Daniels Rhodes. The author has made an earnest study of child life and has worked out through valuable practical experimentation. Plays, pictures and music are used extensively.

These lessons will help the child experience the beautiful lessons of religion which belong to childhood. (The University of Chicago Press.)

Let Speaketh He.

By Gertrude Capen Whitney, author of "Roses From My Garden," "Where the Sun Shines," "On the Other Side of the Bridge," and other books that are filled with thoughts that will impress the importance of the truth on the reader. In the foreword the writer says:

"This tale was woven from threads of thought given me by a child as he stood before the monument erected to the memory of Dennis Cahill, the hero who leaped from the bridge at Augusta, Georgia, hoping to save the life of a babe who had fallen into the turbulent waters." (The Four Seas Co., Boston.)

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

By Mary Caroline Crawford tells us that fascinating book of her "New England Inn" that was called "A Puritan Ordinary" public houses were licensed for the express purpose of promoting the worship of God! And, apparently, there was a good reason that the ordinary of the seventeenth century was to be the place of public worship. Physical as well as mental discomfort attended the church-going of that far-off time. A fire was never kindled in the colonial meeting house and it was almost necessary to continue existence that the good people who had come from miles around to the house of God should find a cheerful place in which to thaw out between the cold drive and the chilly service. Naturally the ordinary came in for a reciprocal benefit during the noon rest for refreshment. It then had opportunity to sell many a morsel of the popular flip. Occasionally, indeed, pious folk were made so comfortable in the tap-room at noon that they were incapacitated for attendance at the afternoon service.

POPE LEO'S BODY TO BE REMOVED FROM ST. PETER'S

Rome, August 2.—The body of Pope Leo XIII, who died in 1903, will be removed next February from St. Peter's to the Basilica of the Holy Cross. So John T. Helleman says in his "Newspaper," that the New England Inn was called "A Puritan Ordinary" public houses were licensed for the express purpose of promoting the worship of God! And, apparently, there was a good reason that the ordinary of the seventeenth century was to be the place of public worship. ## LIFE-SAVING AWARDS GIVEN AT WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., August 2.—(Special—) C. B. Mathewson, Red Cross life-saving examiner, who has been conducting tests at the Davis swimming pool here, has awarded senior certificates to Laura Morgan, Paul Boynton and Carey Sullivan, and a junior certificate to Floribell Everett.

assistant in the selection and arrangement of wall decorations.

But the most important subject of all is "rugs"—how to use them effectively and how to make a great deal of study. She discusses the different periods and how styles will suit different rooms. Furniture woods are as important as colors, and another important as well as attractive feature is the fireplace, etc.

The book closes with some plain instructions on interior decoration as an art, and how you can study it to the best advantage.

Miss Clara Laughlin, author of "So You're Going to Paris" is speaking every week from Chicago WNAQ on foreign travel. "So You're Going to Paris," on its publication, quickly became one of the most popular travel books.

The book closes with some plain instructions on interior decoration as an art, and how you can study it to the best advantage.

Miss Rolfe will receive the sincere thanks of the young folks who want to be homemakers, for it is a splendid guide to an attractive home. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

VOGUE'S BOOK OF ETIQUETTE.

While this book was published some time ago, it is still a "best seller."

It presents the present-day customs of society with the rules for their correct observance.

The book is the work of the editors of Vogue, and is published by Condé Nast Publications.

There are 32 chapters, covering every subject relating to the art of living—the first chapter discussing "The Origin of Manners," and the last, "The Final Test of Breeding," which Houghton Mifflin have just published.

Maud Diver writes in the preface: "I have only to say of these few occasional short stories that the purely Indian ones are true in essence, taken from life; that the opening story, 'Light Marching Order,' is based on an actual incident in the second Afghan war. It was specially presented to me by one who knew with leave, and it pleased me."

FORD'S TEN-MILLIONTH NEARING END OF TOUR

The ten-millionth Ford is on the final stretch of its epoch-making tour from coast to coast on the Lincoln highway.

After a trip through snow banks at a 12,000-foot elevation in the mountains out of Laramie, the car which signifies a new accomplishment in motor transportation rolled on across the remaining miles of Wyoming's broad stretches to Salt Lake City, where Secretary of State S. E. Clegg and Mayor Nelson extended an official welcome to Utah's capital. Later, Frances Renault, vaudeville star, made her initial bow to a Salt Lake City audience from the car, which was introduced into her act, and was driven onto the stage at Panhandle sheets by Frank Kulek, lifetime driver of Ford racing cars, who is piloting the ten-millionth on its way to the coast.

With the exception of Salt Lake City, where the secretary of state was on the job, the car has been welcomed by the governor in every state capital through which it has passed. In Trenton, Governor George S. Miller honored the honored, while Governor N. E. Kendall, of Iowa, headed the committee of welcome at Des Moines, and Governor W. E. Rose, of Wyoming, at Cheyenne.

Among the many thousands of members of the great Ford family that have joined in the hundred parades that featured this historic trip was an antiquated car with six-cylinder model K motor, No. 539. This was at Omaha, and the old "ord" product of 1906 vintage, by perfect behavior and performance, the parade seemed to scorn the passing years.

At Rawlins, Wyo., a unique feature of the welcome was the appearance in the parade of the original Deadwood stage coach, which was driven by cowboys in full regalia, guns sombreros, chaps and all.

Farmers along the Lincoln highway have turned out in their best to do honor, through the passing car, to Mr. Ford, who has given them transportation facilities and traction power unguessed and undreamed of but a few years ago. At one place the parade was joined by a number of farmers with their Ford tractors coupled to trailers loaded with heavy horses. In this emphatic manner the tillers of the soil told the world of the complete triumph of Ford traction units over horses flesh on the farm.

The tour, which celebrates a ten-millionth production of the Ford Motor company, was scheduled to end Tuesday, July 28, when the ten-millionth

Ford enters San Francisco, where a big reception awaits it, and Frank Kulick delivers a letter to the mayor of that city a letter from the mayor of New York, and then drives the celebrated car out to the end of the Lincoln highway.

Studebaker Force Enjoying Outing At Warm Springs

Members of the Atlanta branch organization of the Studebaker corporation and the wholesale and retail departments of Yarbrough Motor company, local Studebaker distributors, are enjoying a week-end outing at Warm Springs as the guests of the Yarbrough Motor company and the Atlanta branch.

Several members of the dealer organization of the Yarbrough Motor company are still in Atlanta after leaving Atlanta Saturday.

One feature of the entertainment was an elaborate "Studebaker" dinner Saturday evening—Studebaker men, Studebaker guests, Studebaker fun, and Bill Styles, manager of the Warm Springs hotel, says add Studebaker music in his cash register. This is the third annual outing of the Yarbrough organization, in which the Studebaker branch organization always joins. It is always a feature to which all members of both organizations look forward with pleasant anticipations.

The anticipations of the past year were largely realized by the party Saturday evening, and it is predicted that before the return to Atlanta each member will have enjoyed the outing to the fullest extent.

Swimming, dancing, hiking and other forms of sport served to entertain the party, which numbered more than one hundred.

LUCY PAGE GASTON IS CRITICALLY ILL

Chicago, August 2.—The condition of Miss Lucy Page Gaston, founder and superintendent of the Anti-Cigarette league, and prominent in reform movements, was still considered serious today by surgeons at a hospital here where she is receiving treatment for a cancerous growth on the left side of her neck.

According to her physician the growth is the outcome of a street accident several months ago in which Miss Gaston was injured. She is 64 years old.

Pioneer Auto Dealer Given Atlanta Chevrolet Contract

By O. J. WILLOUGHBY.

John E. Smith, pioneer among Georgia automobile dealers, and for many years Atlanta dealer for such cars as Buick, Pierce Arrow and Reo, has been awarded the agency for the Chevrolet. Mr. Smith will handle Chevrolet sales and service from his present location at 190-6 West Peachtree, in connection with the Reo. Mr. Smith is probably one of the best-known dealers in the southeast and is one of the few who have consistently, year after year, made a success of the business.

Since taking the reins of the business which was founded by his father more than half a century ago, Mr. Smith has not had a reorganization, but has shown a steady growth. He was among the first in the carriage and coach business to grasp the automobile and to realize that it was the old means of personal transportation and so gradually did he transform his business from one to the other that it dovetailed perfectly with the requirements of the times. It is said by those who are in position to know that not a single year since he assumed management of the John Smith Co. has it failed to make a profit.

Today he controls the old John Smith shop, where automobile painting, top and upholstery work and the machine shop work in connection with his service station on West Peachtree have taken the place of coach building and painting of former days.

His automobile sales and service departments are housed in an automobile building constructed and owned by Mr. Smith. The building is ideally designed and is amply large to handle the sales and service in both lines.

Mr. Smith and the members of his organization—many of whom have been associated with him for ten years or even longer—are well versed in the requirements of the public, from the dealer from whom they buy an automobile.

While the sales and service organization handling the Chevrolet is to be a great extent separate from that of the Reo, it will be built around the men who have been trained and experienced men from his old organization, and it is believed that it will be one of the most efficient and effective of its kind.

B. V. Stodghill, or Barney as he is familiarly known, will keep in personal touch with and direct the Chevrolet organization, and J. S. Read, who has been with Mr. Smith for some time, will have immediate charge of the service department.

The service and parts departments will also have the personal direction of Mr. Stodghill and Mr. Smith and will be manned by trained men of proven ability.

The Chevrolet factory organization and Chevrolet owners in the Atlanta territory are to be represented upon the appointments of Mr. Smith as caretaker of their respective interests.

It is the belief of the new Chevrolet sales organization that Chevrolet will lead, in point of numbers, all cars with a sliding gear, in Atlanta.

Prices of New Models.

According to Nash officials, the low prices which have been placed on these new models are of unusual interest. For many years Nash has been manufacturing and using four-wheel brakes on quad trucks. To the proved and practical advantages worked out have been added most valuable improvements developed by European and American authorities. Simplicity and efficiency are the chief features of the unique design. There are fewer parts and less points requiring lubrication than any other mechanical brake system yet created. Here are a few of the features of Nash four-wheel brakes:

The balloon tires furnished on the Nash Advanced Six series are of the full balloon type, with rib tread in front and combination rib and non-skid tread in rear. The size is 33x6 on all models of the Advanced Six series and 31x5.25 on the Special Six series.

The Nash steering mechanism, designed especially for balloon tires and quad trucks, provides an increase in leverage which completely nullifies the normal steering resistance heretofore characteristic of balloon tires when parking. The steering of these new Nash cars is described as being so easy and effortless that it is bound to be a great admiration.

The Nash front-wheel drive system assures continuous and complete pressure lubrication of main bearings, connecting rod bearings, cam shaft bearings and valve mechanism. All oil is filtered through a net of fine small mesh to prevent the slightest foreign substance reaching the bearing surfaces. Entire filtration and purification of the oiling system is accu-

All models in the new Nash line have new body lines, are equipped with full balloon tires, 4-wheel brakes, disc wheels, and have force-feed engine lubrication.

YELLOW CAB OPENS ATLANTA BRANCH

Increasing popularity of Yellow Cab commercial transportation in the taxicab, motor truck and motor coach fields is evidenced by the establishment of an Atlanta branch of the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Sales corporation of Chicago. Sales and service headquarters have been opened at 251 Ivy street, in charge of L. M. Seelenfreund, local manager.

Yellow Cab products have become well known in Atlanta during the last several years. The Yellow taxicab is used as standard equipment by Yellow Cab company, of Atlanta, the Black and White Cab company, and the Red Top Cab company.

Yellow Cab four-wheel drive motor coaches used as standard equipment by the Chicago Motor Coach company and the People's Motor Coach company, of St. Louis, are rapidly finding a wide market. After building trucks for many years to special order, the Yellow Cab Manufacturing company has now entered the general market with a one-ton unit and a 3-4-ton unit which have attracted more than ordinary attention in the automotive world. Both are offered complete with Yellow Cab built bodies, the Yellow Cab factory price for $1,395.00.

The 1-ton Yellow Cab express chassis is priced at $1,350. f. o. b. factory price to be announced shortly.

The Yellow Cab Manufacturing Sales corporation is the first concern in the truck field to announce a direct from factory to user sales program. This action, the sales in keeping with the policy established ten years ago when Yellow Cabs were first placed on the market. Service is available through regularly authorized stations in each city where Yellow Cab products are sold, which are appointed under contract with the factory.

"Our primary commodity is low cost transportation," says Manager Seelenfreund. "Our vehicles are, in a sense, a secondary product. Originally Yel-

PREST-O-LITE REDUCES PRICE OF BATTERIES

One of the most extensive programs of price-reduction ever announced in the battery industry has been put into effect by the Prest-O-Lite Company, Inc., according to information just received from their general offices at Speedway, Indianapolis, Ind. For some time preparations have been under way which have finally made the achievement possible.

The new prices represent a sizeable saving to the consumer. The standard full capacity improved Prest-O-Lite battery of the type used on most popular cars which has been selling for $20.50 now can be bought by the consumer for $14.95. A high quality, full-size battery produced by a nationally known manufacturer such as a price is considered in trade circles to mark an epoch in the battery business.

For two or three years, the gap between the cost of an open and an enclosed car has been narrowing. There have been forecasts from time to time that this gap would finally close. Now that day is here.

Since the fall of 1921, the Hudson Motor Car company has specialized on its coaches, a type of body which it created. These coaches have now become 75 per cent of Hudson's business.

More recently the standard Hudson coach, which is the well-known economy of quantity production may be applied to them. There is more material and more labor in an enclosed car than in an open one, but the larger volume on the coaches makes up this difference.

In the Essex which it manufactures in the same plant with the open-top Hudson, Hudson coaches still sell at a slight advance over the open car price.

Besides the coaches, there are the Hudson sedan, phaeton and five-passenger and seven-passenger sedan and the Essex touring car.

Champions have standard equipment on Ford cars for 12 years. They are also equipped on Ford trucks and Fordson tractors. Champion X is sold by 90,000 dealers at 60 cents.

SOUND VALUE

Sound products evolve from sound principles.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car is the product of an institution whose principles have always been conceded to be pre-eminently sound.

Sound manufacturing methods that place infinitely more importance on quality than quantity.

Sound financial standing, which permits uninterrupted development and adherence to the policy of constant improvement—

A sound method of selecting dealers, from which an organization has grown that enjoys the complete confidence of the public—

A sound sales and service policy, through which buyers are assured full value for their investment—

These basic principles being sound, it follows as an obvious consequence that Dodge Brothers Motor Car represents sound value.

Record Crop Yield Forecast In Many Georgia Counties

Farmers To Stage Come-back After Struggle With Weevil—Other Crops Good.

Dublin, Ga., August 1.—(Special.) Laurens county, one of Georgia's largest and most fertile areas, is on the threshold of the first real prosperity era since deflation and the '90 weevil joined forces in 1918-19 in a series of depredations which brought this section to its knees.

With excellent prospects for a crop of 20,000 bales of cotton, an average of 16 bushels of corn per acre to 100,000 acres; with the most successful watermelon and produce crop in six years, and a splendid improvement over recent years in practically every other crop, the fall of 1924 promises to place this section in the forefront of prosperous counties. As momentous a step as the conditions promise, it is impossible to expect complete stabilization of prices or market conditions. It will require several years and a period of reasonable conditions to accomplish this.

Laurens Comes Back.

Few counties were struck a more vital blow in 1918-19 than Laurens county. Being one of the largest counties in the state and peculiarly adapted to the growth of cotton, the county produced a large part of the cotton annually. Warnings of weevil conditions, however, and the alarm of deflation were not heeded and despite the frantic efforts of conservative citizens the county "went to the wall." The morale of its people slumped, negro labor left the banks, cotton fields for more lucrative employment in the cities and hundreds of farmers abandoned their farms and took up other work.

Those few courageous farmers who "stuck to their guns" found credit almost impossible. Business men and bankers could not set up a complete reversal of the could be accomplished in a few months. Consequently credit was withheld, except in dire cases, farm experts rallied farmers with diversified ideas and after a battle of three years the skeptical producers were influenced to use poison against the weevil.

Diversification Works. Hundreds of acres of valuable farm lands were uncultivated; banks failed, merchants closed, and a general depression held sway over a section more blessed than many others for growing great grain crops and producing hogs and cows.

Gradually the work of the county agent and the chamber of commerce began to take root and the demoralized condition, but only after a severe lesson had been taught. Diversification ideas were beginning to fall upon listening ears; indeed, the people were turning to anything as a refuge from their plight, with the result that the country today stands in a fair way to recoup much of its lost position, finances and morale.

Producers in the diversification program have seen the fruits of their labor returned an hundred-fold, common sense has prevailed, and Georgia's original biggest county bids fair to take a long forward step with the harvesting of this year's crop.

Raise Big Crops.

In the few instances where cotton fields were converted into truck production, the yields have been more than satisfactory, and despite the ups and downs of the melon market the 1924 acreage of 655 acres has yielded excellent results.

The Sowega Melon Growers' association has functioned this season, with the result that the 64 cars shipped have brought fine prices. Only nine cars of the 64 shipped averaged 24 pounds, the others averaging from 24 to 40 pounds. Gordon D. Shepherd, well-known Georgia cotton expert, has been in charge of the association, has supervised the planting, cultivation and marketing period, and has given his entire time to the work. Melons have been sprayed, inspected, packed and shipped under his supervision, and when finally labeled with the diamond-shaped label of the Sowega association, the 64 cars shipped have brought fine prices.

Mr. Shepherd is district manager for the Dublin territory and throughout the season has maintained offices in the chamber of commerce here, working with County Agent J. F. Hart, Jr., Secretary W. H. Proctor and others.

Cooperative Markets Aid.

The successful season this year, Mr. Shepherd states, presages greater acreage next year, and the recognition of the

Atlantan To Write Bankruptcy Paper For National Magazine

Savannah, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—A New York office, at 165 Broadway, has been opened by the American Bankruptcy Review, a new publication edited by Max Isaac, and the efficient program mapped out and earnestly carried into effect under the auspices of the local chamber of commerce, is due to the editor, Lawrence county's remarkable transformation. Agent Hart is Lawrence county's "first citizen" today. In addition to his invaluable services to the county in an agricultural capacity, he has taken a leading stand in civic, religious and social life in a healthy condition. The acreage is not larger than in 1923, while the state department of agriculture to move him from this county at this time would come nearer provoking a local war than anything since civil war days.

The condition report of Laurens crops up to and including July 25, indicates a crop of 20,000 bales of cotton, 16 bushels of corn per acre to 100,000 acres; with the most successful watermelon and produce crop in six years, and a splendid improvement over recent years in practically every other crop, the fall of 1924 promises to place this section in the forefront of prosperous counties. As momentous a step as the conditions promise, it is impossible to expect complete stabilization of prices or market conditions. It will require several years and a period of reasonable conditions to accomplish this.

The next issue of the publication will contain an article upon "False Financial Statements," by Albert F. Fifield, of the Detroit bar, while the October issue will print an article by Walter S. Dillon, of the Atlanta bar, upon "Conspiracies to Defraud the Bankruptcy Act."

Judge Isaac is at present in New York in connection with the opening of the new office.

Short on Hogs.

There exists a shortage of hogs in the county, many farmers having given little attention to their growth because of prevailing low prices paid for hogs, with an abundant market crop now almost ready for harvest. Large numbers of "feeders" will be purchased and brought here to consume the surplus grain. These will later be sold through cooperative sales at Americus, Plains and Leslie.

BIG TRUCK FARMING PLANNED ON COAST.

Darien, Ga., August 2.—Islands at the mouth of the Altamaha river, unused for agricultural purposes since the abolition of slavery caused a decline in rice growing, are soon to be again a rich and fertile agricultural region.

The area is rapidly draining swamp lands around the old rice fields and truck farming on a large scale will be instituted there. Butler's island, one of the largest in the group, is already cleared to a large extent.

The rice mills, relics of the antebellum days, are in decay and their places are being taken by more modern buildings. The first trucking of truck gardening. Water transportation will afford cheap shipping rates to northern and eastern markets as well as to southern consuming centers. It is pointed out, while foreign importers are not beyond reach.

The tide water reaches them they are not surrounded by salt marsh, the Altamaha's flow keeping the water fresh.

Mention has been made of bringing a colony of Dutch farmers to live here as lands are not unlike those of the Netherlands.

LYONS FARMERS SET UP HOPES.

Lyons, Ga., August 2.—(Special.) Cotton is again rapidly in Lyons county now with prospects for a good crop. Numbers of stalks are being brought in with three and four bolls open to the stalk.

Weevils are everywhere in evidence now, but the continued poisoning and dry weather bids fair to bring a good yield of mature bolls and so Toombs county looks good for a high yield of cotton this year. Some farmers say they will be picking the last of next week.

GWINNETT FIELDS PLANTED WITH COTTON.

Lawrenceville, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—Gwinnett county cotton fields are white in cotton this year. The cotton crop was planted with an increased amount of high-grade fertilizers. During the early spring the plant made rapid growth without setting a large crop of forms, but the last two weeks have been extremely hot and dry, has had its telling effect. A good crop has been set and for sometime the fields have been white with bloom.

The farmers are supplied with calcium arsenate to combat the boll weevil. There is small infestation in the season of the weevil, according to O. J. Johnson, Mr. Johnson, who says most of the weevil were destroyed by an early application of poison. The hot and dry weather has had its telling effect on them also. If the plants get the necessary rains within the next few days a bumper crop is looked for.

The corn, hay and melon crops are in excellent shape, and farmers are finding ready sales for their crops.

CHATTOOGA PLANTERS ENTER HEAVY RAINS.

Summerville, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—The drought which has prevailed in this section for the past three and a half months was broken by local rains Thursday afternoon.

The rain came just at the time all kind of crops, with the exception of cotton, were threatened with destruction by hot, dry weather. Old corn garden vegetables and fruits were rapidly drying up, and a few more days would have seen considerable damage done to such crops, which is now moving from this place. It is estimated that between 50 and 60 carloads of Elberta peaches will be shipped from Summerville this season.

PEAS, PEANUT CROPS PLANTED IN HANCOCK.

Sparta, Ga., August 2.—(Special.) Farmers of Hancock county have put in a large crop of cowpeas and peanuts this year and expect to harvest large crops of both this fall. The lands here are well adapted to the culture of both peas and peanuts, and if properly raised as they have been for the past several years, considerable revenue will be derived from these crops. There are many peanut and pea threshers in the county, which will take care of the crop, putting it in marketable condition.

JEFFERSON PLANTERS PREPARING TO GIN.

Louisville, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—Reports from various sections of Jefferson county and surrounding counties are in many instances glowing, and indicate that the general depression in agriculture has been relieved at harvest time. Preparations are being made by the local cotton gins and other gins in the county to take care of the record cotton crop expected here. Within the next few days the first bales will be brought in, some of the more forward crops being ready to open, and the sun shines on the staple for a few days.

BIG COTTON INCREASE PREDICTED IN LAMAR.

Barnesville, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—It is generally conceded that the prospect for a fine crop of cotton grown in Lamar county is better than it was a few years ago. There has been anything like the encouraging outlook for a yield of cotton. The acreage is not as large as in pre-war times, but there is considerable increase in acreage, the per acre yield is up, and there is evidence of damage from the boll weevil. There were more than 1,500 bales produced in 1922, 3,000 in 1923, and it is believed there will be 6,000 this year. Farmers and business men are elated at the present prospects.

CAIRO GIRL ENDS LIFE WITH SHOT

Cairo, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—The arrest here of W. H. Burke, of Columbia, S. C., who admits he was the head of a syndicate formed for the purpose of dealing in human flesh, is due to the recovery of 21-year-old Miss Lutie Mae Mott, pretty Cairo girl, who ended her life by shooting herself, were held here today. Despondency because of bad health is given as the cause for the act.

A coroner's jury investigating found that the wounds were self-inflicted.

Efforts to connect recent alleged disturbances in lawless areas of the city with the tragedy have proved fruitless.

Miss Mott was a member of the Baptist church and was interested in church and B. Y. P. U. affairs.

GENERAL TRADE--Merchants and Manufacturers--GENERAL TRADE

MERCHANTS' WEEK WILL BE SUCCESS:
KEYES PREDICTS

Forceful Advertising Campaign To Aid in Big Booster Event for Atlanta.

Merchants and Manufacturers' week, scheduled for August 18 to 23, promises to be the most successful event of its kind yet staged in Atlanta, according to a statement, given out by Kenneth Keyes, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association.

A forceful advertising campaign in the local papers as well as a number of representative newspapers over the state is now being published, calling attention to the many advantages offered by Atlanta as a distributing center as well as the superior service offered by Atlanta manufacturers and jobbers.

"With the prospect for a big cotton crop, Atlanta's trade is strong. Local wholesale merchants as well as the retail trade over the territory is very optimistic over the business outlook for fall, and undoubtedly Merchants' week will set the beginning of brisk buying."

"Stocks that have been allowed to run down during the summer months will have to be replenished, and with the Atlanta houses offering such attractive buying opportunities during Merchants' week it is a safe prediction that merchants from all over the south will be here at that time."

A meeting of which the only buyers to combine business with pleasure has been arranged by the association for the week. Some of the entertainment features will include free theater tickets, automobile rides over the city and a trip to stone mountain, the purpose being inspecting the progress that is being made on the Confederate memorial.

The meeting held by the Merchants and Manufacturers' association last week for the purpose of fixing a definite date for Merchants' week, was largely attended, and greater enthusiasm and a better spirit of cooperation was manifested by the members than at any similar meeting in the last several years.

One prominent local jobber, in giving his reasons for predicting a good business this fall, impresses the fact that merchants over the south are realizing more than ever before the wisdom of buying goods from Atlanta houses.

"The strategic location of Atlanta as a railroad center enables local jobbers to make quick shipments to any section of the country, and he can do it by buying from Atlanta houses the small merchants can buy in small quantities, and by making his purchases as he needs goods can keep his stock complete with small capital."

RICH CHINESE GIVES IDEA OF REAL LIFE

Seattle, Wash., August 2.—An idea of real enjoyment for a wealthy Chinese was revealed here today on the return of Wong, a prominent Seattle merchant, from his rich gold mine in Chicagof Island, off southern Alaska, where he said he had "enough gold ore blocked off to make him a millionaire three times over."

"I am going to buy ten acres of garden land," replied Wong, when asked what he intended to do with his money. "I will plant three acres of alfalfa for my cow and raise chickens and vegetables, giving the latter to the poor."

Announcement has been made by the Trivers Clothes, Stores corporation of the appointment of Mr. Louis Adiger to be manager of their Atlanta store.

Mr. Adiger is a man of broad experience in the retail clothing business. For the past seven years he has

"SCHOOL WILL OPEN IN SEPTEMBER!"

"Let's make August the biggest gingham month in the history of our community. There is nothing like a gingham dress for school wear. It is sanitary, stylish, comfortable and economical."

"We have prepared for the rush that will be in gingham during August by assembling all the new and novel patterns in staple and sport designs and colors. Display ginghams everywhere in your store during August. That is the gingham month."

"We are going to offer the greatest variety of merchandise and better value than we have in many a day during the coming merchandising event," he said before making his departure.

been connected with one of the leading clothing stores of the city as buyer and manager. Prior to coming to this city Mr. Adiger was associated with one of the largest and most exclusive clothing concerns in New Orleans. During the period of his 18 years' experience Mr. Adiger states that he has made a special study of the men's wear industry and has been a close observer of the eastern markets.

During his seven years in Atlanta, Mr. Adiger has built up a large following among his Atlanta friends and extends a cordial invitation to them to call on him in his new capacity.

WILLIAMSON IS OFF TO EASTERN MARKETS

Since opening its doors to the public a few weeks ago the Nance Millinery Co., of 24, 25, 28 South Broad street, has been doing a splendid business, sales having exceeded expectations for the first few days.

The store is located directly opposite Rich's department store on Broad street, and is one of the largest exclusively millinery stores in the city.

L. C. Nance, an Atlanta man, who has had fifteen years' experience in millinery buying, and who, for the last four years was connected with a leading Atlanta department store, is sole owner of the new store.

"There are many buyers one of whom when it's due and every one of them will think that, because the amount is small, the merchant must be a piker if he doesn't pay at once. Thus the merchant endangers his credit."

But suppose that instead of owing

money tightens he can send each of

"Retail dealers throughout the southeast, who are interested in

well to get in touch with us at once," said Mr. Ivy, "before this stock is exhausted."

According to Shelley Ivy, of the Southern School Book Depositories,

the announcement of a sale of surplus stationery made last week in

The Constitution, created widespread interest among retail dealers through out the southeast, and practically two carloads of this stock has been disposed of in the last few days.

"We have three more carloads of stationery which we are going to sell at the remarkable prices advertised, and expect to move this entire lot within the next week."

"Retail dealers throughout the

well to get in touch with us at once,"

said Mr. Ivy, "before this stock is exhausted."

"Recent," said Mr. Ivy, "I was on a street car coming into town

and four mutes sat in front of me.

They were carrying on a very animated

conversation in the sign language,

all of which was Greek to me, but I couldn't help observing the expressions on their faces."

"One could almost 'listen in' on the conversation by watching the changing expressions. I realized for the first time how effective was the facial expression in emphasizing a statement. I also realized what a field for study this was for the salesmen and I made a mental note that I would bring this up at our next

GOOD TRADE FOR WEEK

H. Mendel & Co., local jobbers of dry goods and ready-to-wear, report a good business during the last week, many out-of-town buyers being in the house and sending in some nice orders.

H. Mendel, president of the firm, and his son, Simon, are now in New York making purchases for the coming season, and for a special display of merchandise which will be made during Merchants' week.

Known his little sales talk by heart and sings it out without driving his arguments home with an impressive expression of his countenance.

"Many times I have seen a comedian on the stage get a hearty laugh from the audience by some joke that would have fallen flat if it had not been augmented by an appropriate facial expression. I definitely the best of salesmen could learn a few things about expression of mutes and I am going to pass this suggestion along to our own men."

STATIONERY SALE IS PROVING A SUCCESS

In the importance and the necessity of the jobber in the chain of distribution is strikingly emphasized by an article in the current issue of Business, by J. R. Sprague. In pointing out the folly of the average merchant trying to buy from the manufacturer direct, Mr. Sprague says:

"In the first place, a good many of the standard manufacturers sell only through jobbers; or when they do sell direct to a retailer they insist that he buy not less than a certain quantity.

"Now suppose a merchant, by buying a gross of some item gets a price, we'll say, of $10 a dozen instead of the regular price of $12.50 a dozen he would have to pay a jobber. He seems to be saving money. But suppose it takes him a year to work off his gross-lot purchase. All that time his money is tied up. Besides, if he piles up too many gross-lot purchases he's going to be cramped for the money to buy other stuff."

"Then there is the angle. It's dangerous for the new merchant to buy from too many houses. He'd be wiser to concentrate his buying; and he can't do that if he keeps shopping around for prices. Suppose, for instance, he owes $100 apiece to 50 different manufacturers and then business slows down so that one of those 50 manufacturers will won't have money when it's due and every one of them will think that, because the amount is small, the merchant must be a piker if he doesn't pay at once. Thus the merchant endangers his credit."

"But suppose that instead of owing

here.

"Retail dealers throughout the

well to get in touch with us at once,"

said Mr. Sprague, "before this stock is exhausted."

EXPRESSION A BIG FORCE IN SELLING

Olin Stamps, one of the best-known wholesale grocery men in this section, who is now associated with the H. L. Singer company, says that a "dumb" salesman has small chance of making good with any organization, but even the best of salesmen may learn a few things from observing the conversation between the dealers and dumb."

"Recently," said Mr. Stamps, "I was on a street car coming into town

and four mutes sat in front of me.

They were carrying on a very animated

conversation in the sign language,

all of which was Greek to me, but I couldn't help observing the expressions on their faces."

Prosperity Seems Once More Assured for the Merchants
Of the Southeast!

Almost without a single exception we are receiving reports from every section of the Southeast that crops are the best they have been at any time during the past five years.

A good cotton crop now seems reasonably assured throughout the Southeastern States, with all other crops far above the average for the past several years.

Good prices seem certain—not only for cotton, but all other crops. People have practised close economy this year, and crops have been made cheaply.

Stocks of merchandise in the hands of retail merchants, as a rule, are extremely small, because merchants have been exceedingly conservative and cautious this year; and prospects for business now never looked better or brighter than for the remainder of this year.

Realizing that fall trade will soon open up and retail merchants will want shoes in quick time for fall selling, we have prepared to give REAL SERVICE to the retail merchants throughout the Southeast by giving them quick shipments and prompt delivery.

Never before in the history of our business have we been able to offer our customers such splendid shoe values and with a stock of nearly one million dollars of "SHIELD BRAND SHOES" on our floors, ready for immediate shipment, we are prepared to give our customers not only up-to-the-minute styles and the best shoe values obtainable, but we also offer them every advantage of a nearby market, with low freight rates, prompt shipments and quick delivery, which means to the retail merchant quick and profitable turnover during the fall season, when cash trade is active.

Shield Brand Shoes
"Fit Best—Wear Longest"

Prepare yourself to get your full share of profitable business and prosperity this fall by stocking "SHIELD BRAND SHOES," and we will demonstrate to your satisfaction that "SHIELD BRAND SHOES" will increase your shoe sales and shoe profits, and give your customers the best of shoe satisfaction.

Give us an opportunity to serve you for your wants, and you will have no cause to regret it.

We want your business and want the opportunity of serving you.

Prospects Bright for Tech Grid Season With Many '23 Men Back

:: Grant Field With Its Two Banks of Concrete Stands To Be Ready for Football Crowds in September ::

Three Places
On Line for Green Men

BY GEORGE CONGDON,
One month and—FOOTBALL.
Coach W. A. Alexander and his associates at Georgia Tech are preparing for one of the greatest football seasons the school has ever had. In addition to having a strong roster of last year's men and promising candidates, Tech will have an athletic field with a capacity for crowds a third larger than those of last year.

Prospects are that the brilliance of the new white concrete stands nearly complete now, will be eclipsed by the speed and go of the 1924 eleven. Work on the new candidates and culling for the squad will start the first of September, with the first game scheduled for September 27, with the Oglethorpe bunch as the opposing force. By that time the new stands will be covered and completed in every detail.

New Men in Center Line.
The big job that faces Coach Alexander this year is developing a center line that will hold. That's the only place where entirely new men will be seen in action this fall.

Both Claire Frye, regular center of last year, and Fleetwood, first string substitute, are lost to the school this year. There are three men who will be out at the first, but however, will have great possibilities. The most promising of these is John Murray, captain of last year's freshman eleven. The other two are Owen Poole, substitute center last year, and John Glenn, who has played for three years with the scrubs. Center is positioned No. 1 to be filled.

Positions No. 2 and No. 3 to be filled by the new squad are the guard jobs. Captain John McIntyre of the team of '23 has graduated and McConnell, captain-elect, will not be back on account of having lapsed in his work.

Good Prospects.
Four prospects stand out prominently for the two line jobs. There is Goodwin, substitute fullback last year, who has been changed to the line by Coach Alexander. Then there is Carpenter, little Sizemore who substituted for a tackle last year. The other two prospects for the guard positions are Hall and Fair, both substitutes on last year's outfit.

Beyond these three positions, the outlook is the brightest in several years. Tech is "fixed" when it comes to tackles for the 1924 eleven. Jerry Merkle and Haffey, regulars last season, will be out this year, and go back to work between guard and tackle.

The one man lost here is Werner, who was a substitute last year.

Three new men are coming up from the freshman class for tries at tackle. They are Nixon, Carlisle and Carson. All of them did duty on the fresh squad last year.

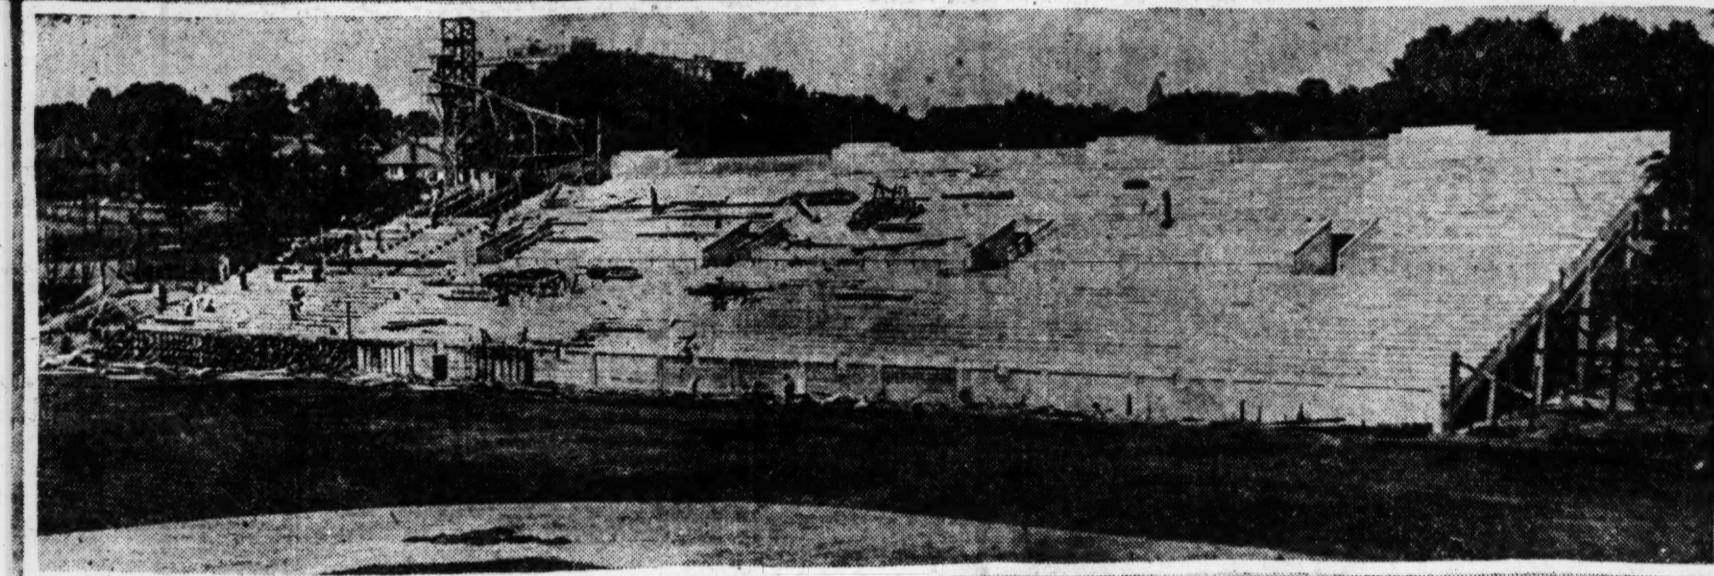

Only one man is missing from the backs of last year, but the loss of him is a big one. It is John Stason, who was a regular last year and worked on the squad for a couple of years before that.

Gardner, Captain, Is End.
George Gardner, captain of the 1924 squad, is the outstanding figure among prospects for the ends. Gardner has worked up to the rank of a star end under real difficulties. Being a co-op student, he last year had to work night and day, and then self up for football duty, but when the owner opened he was rated as a regular. He is from Americus, Ga.

Nashell is another regular end who will be out this year. King and Marshall, both substitute ends last season, will be out for a crack at a regular berth this season, and Rame and Holt came up from last year's freshman class.

The backfield outlook provides real reason for jubilation among Tech football followers. Four regulars will be back in school. They are Doug Wroff, Williams, Bob Reeves and Albright. Beyond these four men there are four subs, Farnsworth, Moore, Harris and Davis, and three men coming up from the freshman class, Connally, Wilton and Sam Murray.

Pinky Hunt Out of School.
Pinky Hunt, who played his last year of Tech football as a regular quarterback on the 1923 squad, is the big loss in the backfield. Smith, substitute last year, and Hancock, counted on to come up from the first-year team, will not be back this year. This is the whole situation at Tech

Photographs by Mathewson &amp; Price, Staff Photographers.

At the top is a panorama of Grant Field, Georgia Tech's athletic field, as it appears now with the old concrete stands on the left and the new stands under construction, at the right. The completion of these new stands in September will give Tech one of the greatest college football fields in the south. In the lower picture is a close-up of the new stands as they are now. A big improvement over the old stands is seen in the exits halfway up the tiers of seats. When completed the new stands will be covered, with the roof extending over the section of the cinder track in front of them. This will allow trackmen of Tech to get in their practice early in the spring under best conditions.

Stribling Signs To Meet
Berlenbach Late in August

Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special)—W. L. (Young) Stribling, the sensation of the boxing game today, and Paul Berlenbach, New York novice and dethroned knockout king, are to meet at last.

"Pa" Stribling, father-manager, announced here today he had signed a contract for his son to battle Paul at the Velodrome in New York on August 26. This bout is to be staged under the heading of a card under the promotion, it is understood, of Tex Rickard.

For Large Purse.
The Stribling youngster is now endeavoring to shake off a light cold, which has come on him of late.

On returning here Tuesday, Stribling will get down to work in earnest to shake off some of the stiffness developed while romping around on St. Simon's Island. He will take on Leo Leonard, a light heavyweight, in Charleston, S. C., on August 12, for the benefit of the "Old Hickory" division.

The Striblings will be in the ring again on August 19, 26 and 30, to be filled.

Positions No. 2 and No. 3 to be filled by the new squad are the guard jobs. Captain John McIntyre of the team of '23 has graduated and McConnell, captain-elect, will not be back on account of having lapsed in his work.

Good Prospects.

Being a co-op student, he last year had to work night and day, and then self up for football duty, but when the owner opened he was rated as a regular. He is from Americus, Ga.

Nashell is another regular end who will be out this year. King and Marshall, both substitute ends last season, will be out for a crack at a regular berth this season, and Rame and Holt came up from last year's freshman class.

The backfield outlook provides real reason for jubilation among Tech football followers. Four regulars will be back in school. They are Doug Wroff, Williams, Bob Reeves and Albright. Beyond these four men there are four subs, Farnsworth, Moore, Harris and Davis, and three men coming up from the freshman class, Connally, Wilton and Sam Murray.

Pinky Hunt Out of School.
Pinky Hunt, who played his last year of Tech football as a regular quarterback on the 1923 squad, is the big loss in the backfield. Smith, substitute last year, and Hancock, counted on to come up from the first-year team, will not be back this year.

BOBBY NAMED
TEAM

New York, August 2.—Robert A. Gardner, captain of the Walker Cup team, tonight announced the lineup of the American players to compete in the international golf matches at Garden City, L. I., on Friday, September 12, and Saturday, September 13.

The following amateurs have no named Gardner that they will play:

Mac R. Marston, Merion; "Chick" Evans, Edgewater; William C. Fowles, Jr., Oakmont; Bob Gardner, Hinsdale; Jesse Gifford, Woodland; Francis Quimby, Woodland; Harrison Leonard, Whitebear; Jess Sweetser, Swaney; Dr. O. F. Willing, Portland, Oregon, and Bobby Jones, Atlanta.

The Stribling youngster has now been up to battle twice before. The first bout was postponed because of developing metacarpel trouble, the malady of the land, which once af fected Mike McTigue. The second bout was called off when Berlenbach was injured sparring with a partner while training for his bout with the young. Rickard is said to have finally induced Paul to meet him.

Positions No. 2 and No. 3 to be filled by the new squad are the guard jobs. Captain John McIntyre of the team of '23 has graduated and McConnell, captain-elect, will not be back on account of having lapsed in his work.

Good Prospects.
Four prospects stand out prominently for the two line jobs. There is Goodwin, substitute fullback last year, who has been changed to the line by Coach Alexander. Then there is Carpenter, little Sizemore who substituted for a tackle last year. The other two prospects for the guard positions are Hall and Fair, both substitutes on last year's outfit.

Beyond these three positions, the outlook is the brightest in several years. Tech is "fixed" when it comes to tackles for the 1924 eleven. Jerry Merkle and Haffey, regulars last season, will be out this year, and go back to work between guard and tackle.

The one man lost here is Werner, who was a substitute last year.

Three new men are coming up from the freshman class for tries at tackle. They are Nixon, Carlisle and Carson. All of them did duty on the fresh squad last year.

Only one man is missing from the backs of last year, but the loss of him is a big one. It is John Stason, who was a regular last year and worked on the squad for a couple of years before that.

Gardner, Captain, Is End.
George Gardner, captain of the 1924

squad, is the outstanding figure among prospects for the ends. Gardner has worked up to the rank of a star end under real difficulties. Being a co-op student, he last year had to work night and day, and then self up for football duty, but when the owner opened he was rated as a regular. He is from Americus, Ga.

KINSEYS LOSE TO GRIFFIN,
JOHNSTON

Seabright, N. J., August 2.—With the Davis cup selections committee looking on, William Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin, former national champions, scored a thrilling uphill victory in the final of the Seabright invitation doubles tournament today, defeating Robert and Howard Kinsey, Californians, in five specta-tory sets. The scores were 3-6, 4-6, 6-1, 11-9, 6-1.

Gardner developed undoubtedly the most sparkling doubles of the season on grass, the rallies being sustained by recoveries that bordered on the incredible. Bob Kinsey's comparatively weak service, which was broken through four times in the last two sets, turned the tide in favor of the right pair.

The victory gave Johnston and Sea-bright their second leg as the right doubles cup.

Miss Helen Wills made her first appearance since her Olympic victory, and she and partner, Mrs.

Watson M. Washburn, had a brilliant doubles exhibition match with Watson and Miss Phyllis Walsh and Dear Mathey. The Wills match went into the customary three sets, resulting in a victory for Miss Walsh and Mathey by two sets to one.

After the first game with Oglethorpe, Tech will meet V. M. I. of Grant field on October 4. Following this the games on Grant field are as

October 11—University of Florida.

October 18—Penn State.

October 25—University of Ala-abama.

November 8—L. S. U.

November 15—Vanderbilt.

November 27—Auburn.

CANADIAN OPEN

Mount Bruno, Quebec, August 2.—

Leo Diegel, of Washington, D. C., today won the Canadian open golf championship. His aggregate for the 72 holes was 285. Gene Sarazen, of Hillsdale, N. Y., was second with a total of 287.

Diegel and Sarazen in the afternoon round played close together and the gallery alternated between the two. However, earlier in the rounds Diegel got the best exhibition of the day, and got the best aggregate on the afternoon round.

Diegel and Sarazen this morning. This made his aggregate 288, and placed him in third position. The other good scores were:

J. Farrell, Mamaroneck, N. Y., 291;

Melhorn, St. Louis, 293; Clarence P. Rock, Atlantic City, 293; N. C. Jones, 295; Mike Brady, Detroit, 299;

Joe Turnesa, Fairview, N. J., 299;

T. Kerrigan, Swaney, N. Y., 307;

Diegel and Sarazen's cards:

One Mistake May Lose Race For Harness-Horse Driver

BY W. H. GOCHER.

There is a very narrow margin between victory and defeat in many races which are contested each year. Over-confidence has put many a driver on the mourners' bench. A mistake in getting a horse ready for a race frequently results in the defeat of a favorite.

Those who follow the races know that the only way to defeat a fast horse in a heat race is to carry the battle to him and hang on as far as you can go. At times when the horses are evenly matched and the fielders unite to pull down the favorite a fresh horse is detailed to carry him each heat and then combine in what will be the final if he wins it. The matter of leaving the decision to a brush in the last quarter only catches those who are not up to much! A skillful man will go along with a fast horse and when the teamster depending on a brush pulls out he has nothing to go on with.

At the last Columbus meeting there was a remarkable contest when Fayette National defeated Etta Druen after she landed a heat in 2:02 1-4. Murphy drove Etta Druen. When referring to the race, he said: "I cannot remember a horse hanging on like Fayette National did in the first heat when the speed rate was so rapid. I thought it could slip away from him in the second heat, but the racing was striding at Etta Druen's head and never seemed willing to let up. Had McKay let me get away from him I would have had a chance to ease up the filly and that might have won the next heat for her. As it was I had to run my best of the heat and the next one, and finally Fayette National wore my horse down. If McKay had made a single mistake he would have been beaten."

Must Force Fast Hope.

Drivers who are in the habit of pulling up and letting the winner jog is should read the above paragraph before going into a race. If they are bothered with a short memory it would be well to remember to look on the inside of their driving caps. At least they should never forget that the only way to defeat a fast horse is to force him up to the top of his speed and keep him going to the end of the route.

The trailer has a greater incentive to go on the fast horses. He has a horse in front of him to catch. The leader is also tormented by his steady footfall of the horse shadowing him. He has no way of knowing how much speed he has in reserve while his driver must be ready at all times to stall off a brush. The majority of horses can make fast when a "hot" is on. When it is used the bolt is short. If a fresh horse comes along the leader is beaten.

Spinners, Blank Peaches.

Greenville, Ga., August 2.—Lehr and Swinson battered out a surprising and smoky duel here today, but Swinson lacked the support that was accepted Lehr and the Spinners blanked Macon 3 to 0 to make it three straight over the visitors and six for a perfect week at home. Swinson yielded but one hit to the outfield and the other four were beats on hard chances by infielders.

Training Always Shows.

The above came to mind after the fast three-year-old gelding Commodore Wilson was distanced at Northampton. He had trotted a good race for him the preceding week at Springfield. At Northampton when warming up Rodine drove him at the end of a smart mile a quarter in thirty-two seconds, a good gait. The clip also took considerable out of the gelding.

The Commodore won the first heat of his race in 2:11 1-4. When scoring for the second heat he began breaking and running. Finally when the word was given Commodore Wilson flew into a gallop and ran like a wild horse. He galloped a mile and a half. He finished limp and was distanced. The fast brush in the last warming up mile had more to do with his defeat than anything in sight as on public form he had four or five seconds on any of his competitors.

When a horse is required to do anything out of the ordinary during a race it is very apt to tilt the chances of victory against him. The most glaring sample of this was seen in Chicago in 1883. That was the year that John Murphy brought out Majolica. In his first race at Fleetwood Park, N. Y., the Startle gelding, which was bred by Robert B. nuer, won from Judge Dan, Phyllis, Frank and Grand Peacock in 2:17, the fastest ever made by a great trotter in a race up to that date. The following week Majolica won the C. Y. stake at Albany from Phyllis and four others in 2:19 1-2. He also won at Washington, Phyllis being again second.

From that point the horse was shipped to Chicago. Majolica was started there with Phyllis, Felix and Index. He won the first heat in 2:17. On the next trip the starter, Charles Smith, gave the word and rang the bell by mistake. Murphy went over the course. At the time the rules did not require the other competitors to do so. The time for the heat was 3:41.

Murphy Avent On.

When Majolica was pulled up the other horses were standing on the stretch. When Murphy returned to the judges' stand the starter asked if he would then score for the third heat or claim the time fixed before heats for the rules. Murphy agreed to do so. Majolica lost the third heat to Phyllis in 2:16 1-2. After the heat he was very much distressed. He also lost the race in 2:20, 2:21 1-4.

Can a fast horse that has been out of the races for a couple of years come back and tip the margin of victory? It is a question that is discussed freely by turfmen. One morning last June while at Syracuse a few of those who had been over to Gosford and seen Grayworth train were discussing the subject. At that time the gray gelding was up to 2:10 and had been showing his old-time gait at the end of each race. Murphy, who was said and as he turned to take a mount said: "Grayworth is a nice little horse. He had a wonderful turn of speed but he <sup>never</sup> never come back and race at he did. He has been off too long."

The returns for the first four Grand Circuit meetings at Clevelend he finished 9, 8 to Tramptab in 2:06 3-4, 2:08 and then won the third heat in 2:06 1-4, trotting the last half in a minute. At Columbus the following week Cox had him with Peter the Brewer, Cupid's Alibi, Clyde the King, and Tuck's Tuck. The results of the summary placed him 5, 3, 6 in 2:03 1-2, 2:02 1-2, 2:05 1-2. At Toledo Grayworth was unplaced to Fayette National in 2:04 1-4, while at Kal-

FORMER FLYWEIGHT CHAMPION WOUNDED

New York, August 2.—Joseph Sanducci, known in the ring as Bobby Doyle, former holder of the flyweight championship, was wounded last night by gunmen for the second time within a year. His brother, Terry, was shot and killed by an unknown assassin two years ago and the police said the remaining brother was intended to be the victim of a similar murder plot.

The boxer lost the flyweight title to Frankie Génaro. Since he was shot the first time he has been unable to engage in boxing.

Sally League

Spartans Trim Tourists.

Spartans Trim Tourists. Spartan, S. C., August 2. Red Bond was hard to find in the last heat and the Tourists' eleven left on bases explains in some measure their 9 to 2 defeat by Spartanburg in their last appearance on the local lot this season. The Spartans hit Slaphey hard in the first inning and took a lead from Gibson in the fourth, making even score in the ninth except one in the sixth session. Redfern, Slaphey, and the two home runs of Gibson and Mealey were the only catches those who are not up to much! A skillful man will go along with a fast horse and when the teamster depending on a brush pulls out he has nothing to go on with.

Fast fielding helped Bond out of tight places many times. Two sensational catches were contributed by Harry Miller.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVII., No. 53.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 3, 1924.

Keely's Annual August Linen Sale

LOVERS of fine Linens look forward to Keely's Annual August Linen Sales just as lovers of music look forward to Grand Opera. It's an institution which Southern housewives wait for in order to stock up their linen closets for another year, or to secure lovely linen gifts for brides or Christmas giving. And because for over half a century we have been dealing in fine linens, "Keely Linens" are synonymous with QUALITY.

800 Yards All Linen Damask

Bleached & $1.65 Also Cream
Unbleached 70 Inches Wide

—This heavy all linen damask was purchased directly from a manufacturer in Belfast, Ireland, at quite a concession in price. "We've been dealing with you for years—now give us a real bargain for our August Sales," we asked. "All right," he said, "you can have the lot at—," and he named a figure that enabled us to make this one of the big features of this event.

Grass Bleached Irish Damask

—It's a good guess that most of the homes of Atlanta have some of this damask on their shelves, for it is a quality we have sold for years, but never before since 1913 has the price been so low. In a good assortment of patterns. Yard $2.45

22-inch Napkins to match—$7.50 Dozen

Bordered All Linen Pattern Cloths

—These are also grass-bleached, which means that no chemicals were used in their bleaching process—just pure water and the sunshine of "Old Ireland." Four sizes in several patterns:

2x2-yard cloths, $5.95 2x3-yard cloths, $8.95
2x2½-yard cloths, $7.50 2x3½-yard cloths, $10.45

GOOD TIMES AHEAD.

Crop reports from all sections of Georgia, and from the southeast, continue encouraging.

Cotton, except in the central and northern sections of the state, and in the Carolinas, is practically made.
The younger bolls, even in the southern Georgia counties, are even now subject to weevil puncture, and dusting should continue for awhile yet.

In the northern counties and in the Carolinas dusting should continue for several weeks.

In the meantime, however, the estimate of a million-bale minimum yield to Georgia has not been changed.

At prices that are supposed to rule due to the small carry-over, this should bring at least $150,000, 000 into this state.

The tobacco sales begin next Wednesday uniformly at all the Georgia warehouses. This is a new cash commodity in this state, but this year's yield is estimated at $7,000,000.

There is more corn and hay in Georgia this year than in a generation—and the corn yield especially is almost unprecedented. This crop, except in the mountain valleys, has largely been made.

Dairying, poultry culture, commercial stock growing, fruit and nut growing, melon growing and scores of other production activities have clearly placed Georgia in the list of states where diversification, coupled with improved marketing, has saved the farmer who was severely crippled by boll weevil invasion. The latter—with its tremendous losses to producers—has in reality served as a stimulant in bringing about a more satisfactory farm system—that of balanced agriculture instead of the single crop.

There is reason for optimism in Georgia. As the farmer prospers so does every business prosper, for agriculture is Georgia's basic industry.

There are good times ahead for Georgia this fall and winter.

AN ECONOMIC CRIME.

That tons of the finest peaches ever grown from Georgia soil are rotting on the ground while the shelves of grocery stores throughout the state are packed with canned peaches from California, and other fruits from distant regions, is nothing less than an economic crime.

It seems, indeed, a pitiful thing that, after we have been blessed with a bountiful fruit crop of excellent quality, we are unable either to market it or save it from decay for use in the future.

How does it happen that now, and for many years in the past, one may find in any Georgia grocery store an abundant supply of California canned and evaporated peaches, canned apples from New York, pears and other fruits from various states, while no Georgia canned fruits may be found, notwithstanding the fact that bushels of the finest fruit may be going to waste within sight of the merchant's door?

Obviously the Georgians have displaced us in our own markets.
How have they done this?

In the first place they have produced a high grade of fruit. They have stood by their orchards and vineyards through thick and thin.
They have not permitted a few adverse seasons to turn them away.

from the fruit industry. They have looked upon it as a permanent thing and have perfected great packing establishments for canning and otherwise preparing their fruit for market, and they have organized a vast selling agency which reaches every nook and corner of the country.

All over Georgia industrious housewives are now busy canning fruits and vegetables for family use, and this is a highly important contribution to the family support, and shows that our fruits can be canned successfully, but at the same time it emphasizes the glaring lack of commercial packing facilities in this state.

Under the present tragic circumstances we might well take a lesson from the Californians. Briefly it is this:

Make good fruit, pack it well, can the surplus, organize a distributing agency which will find and supply the open markets.

INEXCUSABLE DELAY.

That the present tariff law will be an issue in the approaching campaign between the two major parties is assured.

That the long and apparently inexcusable delay of the United States tariff commission in submitting a report on the sugar hearing, begun more than two years ago, will come up for attention, is obvious.

Senator La Follette, who is running for president on an independent-radical-socialist ticket, has already precipitated the issue from the viewpoint of alleged intimidation, obstruction and near-corruption;

but whether there is any evidence to justify undue activity of the sugar interests of this country and Cuba in smothering the truth, or in tampering with the hearing, remains to be seen.

At first glance it would appear that there may be no evidence of that nature.

Radicals of the La Follette type feel upon scandal, and too often attempt to create scandal where there is no good reason in fact for so doing.

AN URGENT DEMAND

Public health, and the conservation of human energy through the eradication of preventable or communicable diseases, is very justly linked with education, in importance.

It is embarrassing to admit the truth, in the face of the staggering fact that Georgia stands next to the last state in the union in support of public education, but it is also a fact that Georgia is doing less for public health, including the prevention of diseases, than any state in the south, and so much less than her sister states that the comparison is little less than disgraceful.

Like the same temporizing methods of the interstate commerce commission in the matter of the Pullman surcharges, if there is not more attention to the general public welfare and less indifference to the interests of the great masses of people who are sorely and unreasonably taxed for the benefits of special interests, there will be more scandals, and just as they have been located in the past they will be traced directly to functioning departments of the government.

The Fordney-McCumber tariff act—the most drastic bill of the kind ever enacted even by the political proponents of a high protective tariff—was placed in the statutes in the fall of 1921.

It was the first direct party legislation under the republican administration that began on March 4 of that year.

By the winter of 1921-22 the burdens upon the consuming masses began to become almost unbearable.

Sugar—a necessity in every home —shot up, under the high protective schedule—to a new high water mark.

The protests of the housewives of the country, regardless of political affiliations, became so loud that President Harding ordered a hearing as to the direct effect of the tariff upon retail prices, and in his order declared that if the tariff was found responsible he would undertake, under the provision vesting such authority in the executive, to lower the duty rate.

That has been two and one-half years ago. That hearing was conducted immediately after the executive order, and to this date no report has been made to the public, and possibly will not be made, except in a preliminary and perhaps ambiguous way, until after the fall elections.

There is such governmental tactics as this, where supposedly non-partisan agencies provided to protect the public are in reality withholding protection from the public, that has caused a great element of people in this country to lose confidence.

These are the tactics that have invited radicalism and third-party-ism and many of the other ills and schisms with which the country is even further afflicted.

If the existing tariff commission cannot function as provided in the act creating it the members should be dismissed and an entirely new personnel installed.

The same thing applies to the interstate commerce commission.

The public suffers far more from administrative inefficiency and indifference than from outside corruption.

This bill should pass. It does nothing more than to place the
issue before the people.

At any rate the legislature of this state should recognize the importance of health, and of the conservation of human strength from the economic viewpoint.

It is a shame to see Georgia's statistical position in these matters.
There is no explanation except that petty politics—always destructive—holds the state in a death grip, and that great, constructive ends must be sacrificed to the system.

There is much food for thought in what Mrs. Barnwell says. Her article, republished from the Times, appears on this page.

The suggestion that congress shall prohibit the wearing of high-neck wool uniforms in summer is sensible but may strike a snare with the rejoinder that after all styles cannot be legislated, and if so, perhaps, the designers' union of this country and France, and other style marts, might maintain a lobby in Washington infinitely too strong to permit of other, and perhaps more important, business.

At any rate styles are merely appeals to vanity, and necessarily contemplate in some way the wearing of clothes.

There is no doubt that so-called conventionality—that is, proper respect and chivalry for the opposite sex—commands men the wearing of far too much, and sometimes entirely too heavy, clothing.

If some designer of men's clothing should leave off the coat and the vest and make a loose-fitting blouse "conventional" all would be well, and the fashion plates of society would stampede for the new order.

It is just the way the style makers make it, and if they were to abbreviate men's garments as are the garments of the women, and the crown prince of England, to illustrate, should brave the streets and hotels with the new style, the whole thing would be solved. Men would readily turn back to the styles of the Adam period, if fashionable in this day.

And while we are figuring on new styles it may be interesting to note that Leonard Hill, the great English authority on climatology, commands the Egyptian robes as hot weather—although they undoubtedly sway and flap in ungainly fashion.

They do have the advantage of eliminating the tight collars and belts, at any rate. And that means much for hot weather comfort.

The plea of Mrs. Barnwell is certainly along the right line.

AN URGENT DEMAND

Public health, and the conservation of human energy through the eradication of preventable or communicable diseases, is very justly linked with education, in importance.

It is embarrassing to admit the truth, in the face of the staggering
fact that Georgia stands next to the last state in the union in support
of public education, but it is also

a fact that Georgia is doing less for public health, including the prevention of diseases, than any state in the south, and so much less than
her sister states that the comparison is little less than disgraceful.

In Georgia the appropriation per capita for the prevention of disease is 3.7 cents; in Florida 18.2 cents, in North Carolina 7.9 cents; in South Carolina 9.2 cents; in Alabama 6.3 cents. And yet a human life in Georgia is just as valuable as it is in any other state. It costs just as much for the counties and cities and towns in Georgia to care for the widows and orphans as it does in North Carolina or Florida or Alabama.

Georgia suffers in many ways through a legislative policy that refuses to reconstruct and modernize its tax system, and refuses to readjust its resources and expenditures that worthy economies may be practiced, and flagrantly wasted.

In Georgia we often strain at gnats and swallow camels; we too often dissipate on inefficiencies and contract and starve efficiencies.
Schools are not properly maintained, and state institutions are left to meet 1924 demands with facilities that were provided a generation ago for the demands of that day and time.

Business methods and business departmental administrations are sorely handicapped by a political system that is destructive rather than constructive.

But there must be a change, and there must and can be found ways and means—and without tax increases—to provide funds for some of the imperative demands upon this state.

The repairs to the capitol is one of these demands, and it is hazardous and glaringly wasteful to let this building go longer without these repairs.

If they can't marry the Prince of Wales off any other way they might send him to an all-day Georgia singing.

There is something radically wrong. Public health is a paramount economic question. Malaria costs Georgia directly millions of dollars a year in the complete loss of, or inability of man power. Malaria is preventable. The same is true of dengue and typhoid, and pel-lagra and hookworm, and other diseases.

There is a constitutional amendment pending in the assembly that seeks to provide at least a definite and tangible public health policy and financial support by the allocation of a per capita of the total revenues of the state of Georgia, in accordance with the following table:

For the year—

1925 ..... 4 cents per capita

1926 ..... 6 cents per capita

1927 ..... 8 cents per capita

1928 ..... 10 cents per capita

1929 ..... 11 cents per capita

1930 and annually there-
1931 ..... 12 cents per capita

This per capita should be based on the total population as shown by the previous enumeration made by the United States bureau of census.

This bill should pass. It does nothing more than to place the
issue before the people.

At any rate the legislature of this state should recognize the importance of health, and of the conservation of human strength from the economic viewpoint.

It is a shame to see Georgia's statistical position in these matters.
There is no explanation except that petty politics—always destructive—
holds the state in a death grip, and
that great, constructive ends must
be sacrificed to the system.

up now, and wipe out the stigma that is fastened upon the state through legislative indifference to education and public health.

WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

The First Miracle

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan. (John 2:1-11).

And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:

And both Jesus was called, and His disciples, to the marriage.

And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto Him, They have no wine.

Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

His mother saith unto the servants, Whatever He saith unto you, do it.

And there were set there six waterpots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.

Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

And He saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the Drawers.

When the ruler of the feast had tasted the wine that was made, and knew not whence it was: (but the servants which drew the water knew); the governor of the feast called the bridegroom, and saith unto him, Come forth; for many are gathered together, but there have not enough waiters.

This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee; and manifested forth His glory; and His disciples believed on Him.

The first miracle performed by Jesus teaches many lessons and has been expected to a variety of interpretation.

The outstanding fact is that on His human side the Master entered fully into the social life of His time.

While He was always about His "Father's business," He recognized that His Father is interested in every phase of life and has a part in all that is necessary to man's happiness and welfare.

Marriage being an ordinance of God, and indispensable to the continuation of the human race, Jesus quite naturally accepted the invitation extended and attended the wedding at Cana of Galilee.

The fact that He did attend and performed His first miracle is cited as proof that His blessing rests upon this sacred relationship.

The family is the nursery of the church as well as the unit of society.

Several facts suggest, though they do not prove, that the marriage took place at the home of a relative or intimate friend. The invitation included His disciples, then six in number; that would indicate that Christ was not a casual acquaintance.

His mother's conduct, both in interesting herself in the supply of wine and in giving directions to servants, shows familiarity with the household.

Embarrassing Situation.

It was reported that the emperor of China was at Cana of Galilee.

language revealed more than curiosity at least, the answer of Jesus shows that He interpreted it as a request that He supply the wine. As the quantity (from 100 to 150 gallons) was too great to be obtained from ordinary sources, she must have had in mind the working of a miracle.

She had confidence in His supernatural power, knowing, as she did, the exercise of supernatural power at His birth.

Christ's reply, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come," may have been a warning against future attempts to decide when He should put forth His omnipotent arm.

Mary was His mother and had a mother's pride in, as well as a mother's fondness for, her son. She was not restrained, as Jesus was, by the question of the propriety of the use of information on crime.

He was not at liberty to experiment; He had refused to turn stones into bread and to cast Himself down from the pinnacle of the temple. Mary probably knew this, but saw in the helping of others a stronger reason for performing a miracle than He had when He alone would be benefited.

Tests of Friendship.

Some have criticized Christ's language, but such criticism proves unkindness on the part of the critic.

There are many tests of friendship; one of the surest is that a friend never criticizes him after he has investigated.

If an enemy is reported as doing wrong, the natural response is, "I am not surprised" or "I expected it." How different if a friend is accused: "Impossible," we exclaim. "It cannot be true." "Just wait until you hear his side."

We have on Christ's side. It is difficult to harmonize the imperative demands of a transcendent mission with the ordinary routine of a home—as difficult as it would be for a finite mind like His mother's to lay out work for the Son of God.

But Jesus complied with the mother's request and the quality of the "water that was made wine" was testified to by the ruler of the feast in strong language.

Simplicity of Miracle.

This first miracle performed by Christ had all the mysteries of a miracle and all the simplicity of the miracle all at once.

Nature turns water into wine every chance to honest men who have fallen in business.

Innumerable illustrations will occur to the reader; in fact, every great moral reform accomplished in a thousand years has been built upon His teachings, and all the important reforms of the future will be inspired by His thought.

Prohibition is the greatest moral reform ever won at the polls and is in entire accord with all that Jesus taught.

We can better entrust the interpretation of Christ's teachings to disinterested, churchgoing Christians rather than those who, for the money to be made out of the business, conspire against the safety of the individual, the sanctity of the home, and the purity of politics.

No Christian need fear the First

Miracle; those who try to use it to defend the saloon are the ones who would, for pecuniary gain, use the pardon of a sinful woman as an excuse for immorality.

year—millions of gallons of it—but nature requires more machinery for her work. She must have grapevines of a certain age, and sunshine and rain—and months.

Nature cannot be hurried, but give her time, and the vine, which draws from the ground will gather certain additions in transit and then the wine press will separate the water, flavored and fragrant, from the husks, so to speak, and you have the unfermented fruit of the grape.

Give nature a little more time and she will transmute a harmless and wholesome beverage into an alcoholic poison.

Nature is God's chemical laboratory, but He can work outside of His laboratory as well as inside.

He has not transferred to nature the right to create—not even the exclusive right to change.

If nature is empowered by Him to do certain things in certain ways, He does not surrender His right to do anything He pleases in any way He likes. He can do instantly what nature can do slowly, and also what nature cannot do at all.

What Sacrifice?

This miracle is unique in one respect: its authenticity is admitted by some, but not by any other miracle was ever performed.

It is interesting to see how quickly the champions of the saloon seize upon the "miracle" at Cana to bolster up their fight against prohibition. What sacrifice to associate the tender and loving Savior with the distiller, the brewer and the liquor dealer!

When Christ came to St. Peter's little children to come unto Him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee; and manifested forth His glory; and His disciples believed on Him.

The first miracle performed by Jesus teaches many lessons and has been expected to a variety of interpretation.

The outstanding fact is that on His human side the Master entered fully into the social life of His time.

The fact that He did attend and performed His first miracle is cited as proof that His blessing rests upon this sacred relationship.

But it is not necessary to believe that the wine made from water was unfermented and therefore non- intoxicating.

Prohibition is an entirely new method of dealing with the liquor question. The use of wine was an ancient custom; the Bible tells us that Noah planted a vineyard and drank of the wine thereof and was drunk.

Abraham was merry with wine when Queen Vashti refused to obey his command to appear before a lot of drunken revellers—a disobedience which cost her her crown. Achille, in their famous quarrel over Helen, called Agamemnon a winebibber.

Total abstention has not unknown in the earlier days has very much increased during the last century.

There were in the Old Testament total abstainers, like Noah, who was the first to be baptized.

Difference in Brought.

Objection is raised on account of the dissimilarity in disposition and temperament of the Northern and Southern Methodists. I wonder why they differ so much in temperament.

Several tests suggest, though they do not prove, that the marriage took place at the home of a relative or intimate friend.

The invitation included His disciples, then six in number; that would indicate that Christ was not a casual acquaintance.

His mother's conduct, both in interesting herself in the supply of wine and in giving directions to servants, shows familiarity with the household.

No Christian need fear the First

Miracle; those who try to use it to defend the saloon are the ones who would, for pecuniary gain, use the

pardon of a sinful woman as an excuse for immorality.

There are probably few boys or men who have not wished at some period of their lives that they were pirates and stories about pirates are always popular. Although pirates were by no means the chivalrous characters that should make favorite heroes of fiction, their undoubted bravery and recklessness, their freedom from conventions and laws and the adventurous life they led account, no doubt, for their popularity. Not withstanding the fact that stories about pirates have far too often departed from the historical facts, the true story of the pirate is full of interesting and thrilling.

Piracy is said to be the third oldest profession in the world. Piracy flourished during the seventeenth century but by the middle of the eighteenth century it was on the wane and had practically died out by the beginning of the nineteenth.

The advent of the telegraph and of steam-driven ships marked the end of piracy as it is generally understood. Who are the modern pirates?

An opponent of unification writes:

"These two matters are of supreme importance, the first touching the conditions, privilege and duties of church members, and the second the qualifications and duties of the ministers.

For just about the time he was saying this the northern delegates would urge that their present condition of membership should remain unchanged," the northern general conference had changed the conditions so as to conform practically to our own.

As to women being licensed as local preachers, the northern church confesses, while we do not know how the south would do, that it is not the case.

The objection is urged that the delegates are faced to face with actual conditions which they believe and expect unification to modify greatly to their comfort and advantage. Who would suppose that the old south, with its sentimental, backward, and superstitious church, would be willing to give up its old ways and ways of life for the new ones?

The objection is urged that the delegates are of different religious backgrounds, and that they are not of the same religious faith.

On Mobilization Day TEN YEARS AGO AND NOW

(The following is issued by the committee on church cooperation):

"I do not favor any plan contemplating mobilization of the civil or industrial resources of the country, or anything else than savors of a national holiday devoted to preparation for war."

In these words, Governor Bryan, of Nebraska, nominee of the democrats for vice president, speaking of President Coolidge's proposal for making September 12 a sort of "mobilization day," has voiced the thought of thousands of American citizens.

At the other end of the country, Governor Baxter, of Maine, with reference to the same subject, has said:

"Instead of calling out our young men fully armed for the war, it is a better strength, would it not be more helpful to the cause of peace to have a 'day' on which the whole country would rise up and demand that the senate adopt President Coolidge's world court, a day on which the country would show that it will be prepared to meet any imminent危機 of armament conference, if it deems it advisable to call one?"

"Such a 'day' would be well worth while and would inspire confidence among all our neighbors."

Stirring Up Trouble.

President Faunce of Brown university suggests:

"The spirit of petty nationalism still keeps Europe in a state of tension, and we have had our own Congress in recent days needlessly to offend Japan, against the protest of our own president. And that affront, which has deeply hurt a sensitive and friendly people, is now followed by a call to observe a 'mobilization day' in the month of September."

"On the day a hundred million in a time of peace are to be invited to visualize the engines of war and all the preparations for actual slaughter."

"Will not Japan and all the nations of the world visualize that an automatic defense?"

"In the autumn, we might mobilize all our resources for peace; that we might enable all nations to visualize our many treaties of arbitration, our ancestral faith in courts of law, our hope for the final federation of the world. Let every man be an ambassador of good will, spreading the gospel of brotherhood from the house tops, in favor of law, not war, of reason in place of force, of the friendly hand in place of the mailed fist."

Those Who Died.

Any one who recalls the events of July week ten years ago will consider carefully these words:

"These have, at the movies, our hearts, have, as they came to us again the pictures, taken ten years ago, flash across the screen, the scenes of the mobilization of Russian, German, Austrian, French and English troops, following the assassination of a petty prince in far-off Serbia."

"Now, thought then of what would come later. Look at the picture before us.

Our own boys, marching in solid ranks beneath the Arch de Triumph as they came to take their place beneath our flag, with all the world to back us.

They will not return.

They will not be seen in our midst again save on the screen.

At Chateau Thierry, Belleau Wood, in the Argonne and on other fields, they gave their all.

With the rest of our fellow men, some of them our enemies then, but now having paid the price of death, at peace with all, they sleep in Europe's breast.

Must the death of our loved ones ever be the price which we must pay for peace?"

Is the measure of the sacrifice of mothers' sons not yet full enough, that we must go out our way always parading and preparing for more and more butchery of their sons?

The Soldier Speaks.

Major General John F. O'Ryan, one of those who led our troops and fought in France, says:

"The United States is in the best position to initiate the movement to abolish war. Let America go after world peace and world peace can be achieved. Let us get busy, and see what we can contribute to the huge cause of peace. Let American soldiers find plenty to do in the way of wage peace."

General O'Ryan also said:

"I would be a traitor to my country if I did not do everything in my power to abolish war."

Surely this is no time for flaunting the mailed fist in the face of the world.

Rather those pierced hands, nailed to the cross and lifted up in order that all of God's children in every nation might be caressed and gathered together in one, by Christ Jesus, our Lord should be pointed out.

We should parade not our guns but the Prince of Peace.

If we will, our reward will be even more glorious than was that when our troops entering Paris saw little boys and girls kneeling on the city pavements to thank God for the coming of the King of the world.

In every nation on the globe, mothers and fathers who must furnish the "cannon fodder" when the drums begin to roll and call, will call America blessed for making an end of war.

TOOMBS COUNTY SHIPS SWEET POTATO CROP

Lyons, Ga., Aug. 2.—(Special) Large numbers of visitors have been coming to Lyons during the past two weeks to look over the sweet potato fields in Toombs county, south of Lyons. The nineteenth car was loaded here Thursday with 100 barrels holding eleven pecks each. Four cars have been sold on the track to eastern buyers, and returns have been received for four eastern cars, with the fifth car, sixth, selling in an eastern market at a fancy price.

Farmers are digging the late plantings now and are running from 10 to 20 barrels to the acre, while the early plantings that were dug last week yielded over 40 barrels to the acre. Farmers from Metter, Graymont, Aiken, Tarrytown, Cobbtown, Uvalda and Macon have been trucking to cars being loaded here continuously.

Bonaventure Arms

"The Best Built Apartment in Atlanta"

IN this new 7-story, fire and soundproof building we can arrange units from 1 room with bath to 5 with two baths, furnished or unfurnished.

DID you know that an apartment could be built sufficiently fire-proof as to carry an 11c insurance rate? The Bonaventure Arms, located on Ponce de Leon avenue, corner of Bonaventure, shares this distinction exclusively.

THIS BUILDING has every modern convenience, including 8 elevators. Bedrooms have large closet space, Murphy beds if desired, and the floors of entire building are carpeted; ample auto storage space which may be reached from interior of building. ALL housekeeping apartments have modern kitchens, in addition to which a first-class dining room, which is now open, will be operated by Mrs. Chas. W. Murray.

OUR representative at building will take pleasure in showing you any hour of day and until 9 o'clock in evening.

Morningside

In the Charmed Circle of the South's Most Rapidly Growing City

The boundaries of Morningside encircle that beautiful section of wooded hills contiguous to Piedmont and Ansley Parks, where Nature, with seeming intention and lavish hand, has demonstrated her finest artistry in the fashioning of sites for homes. Here, at an elevation from which one may see in the distance the domes and spires of Atlanta's churches, the constant play of summer breezes through large areas shaded by beautiful old oaks and towering pines, afford the cool and quiet atmosphere which is invariably associated with the most desirable and exclusive residential sections.

With such ideal resources at their disposal, landscape and building architects are rapidly carrying forward the transformation of Morningside, which, under their direction, is becoming a scene of beauty unsurpassed by any similar section in any city in America.

Thousands Visit Morningside

Each Sunday thousands of visitors take advantage of the opportunity to see Morningside. In fact, it is estimated that 20,000 persons last Sunday viewed this magnificent new development, which is destined to take its place among the most noted and distinguished residential sections in America. And each week reveals new progress. Those who have visited Morningside on more than one occasion during the past few weeks have been astonished by the evidence of magnificent new homes, new paving, new landscape work and other features of added loveliness and charm, which indicate rapid progress in development.

Morningside's Beautiful Drives

Morningside is intersected by beautiful drives, wandering in and about the wooded hills and ravines and sweeping off into long vistas of avenues, stretching into the wooded distances.

Morningside Drive will soon be accorded a place among such well-known drives as Riverside of New York and Lakeshore, of Chicago. It is a superb roadway 70 feet wide and two miles long, which forms a link between Ansley Park and Druid Hills. And along its entire two miles it is bordered with elm and crepe myrtle planted by the Atlanta Woman's Club in memory of that distinguished son of the South, Woodrow Wilson.

In addition to Morningside Drive, there are three other notable highways which traverse this exclusive residential section; Lanier Boulevard, Cumberland Road and Sherwood Road. These drives have been planned to conform in every respect with Morningside Drive. The landscape work, the paving and all other phases of adornment and construction are being carried out on the same high standards.

It is in a neighborhood already established and permanently assured of its delightful surroundings.

WHEN a homesite is selected, it is a comfortable feeling to know that not only will your individual site and its conveniences be to your liking, but that your neighboring homesites and their surroundings harmonize with yours.

SUCH is the satisfaction of those who will buy or build in Virginia Highlands.

ON its borders are beautiful homes and throughout the property are beautiful drives and boulevards, made more attractive by virgin shade, shrubbery and ornamental lighting.

AT hand there is every convenience for comfort and good health—the things that add to the pleasure of good living.

LAST but not least, a home in Atlanta means living in a progressive city with wonderful climate, splendid educational advantages, and opportunities for the head of the family to accumulate his full share of this world's goods.

VIRGINIA Highlands strongly appeals to careful and discriminating purchasers, and you can well afford to take an hour's time driving over the property and judging its merits for yourself.

THE PARTHENON—IN TENNESSEE
Art, beauty and historic interest of the Old and New Worlds are centered in this replica in Nashville of the Parthenon, most beautiful of all edifices with which Pericles adorned the Acropolis, in Athens, Greece, 400 years before the birth of Christ. The modern builders have adhered strictly in construction of this replica to the Doric type of architecture which made the original a wonder of beauty and stateliness. As the ancient Parthenon, a temple to the goddess, Athena, housed Greek art treasures, the replica will be the home of notable art collections of Tennessee people. The building was erected as a temporary affair during the Tennessee Centennial exposition in 1895 and 1896, and its completion as a permanent structure will be celebrated at an early date.

*One of Them Had to

E must be a great character," said Alice Browne, a trifle wistfully. "Great nothing!" replied Marianna, stuffing a tube of cold cream into a tiny slipper. "He's a great goose—that's husband." But his own sister says he'll get over that. Once he's married he'll be as easy to handle as those trained vacuum cleaners they advertise. Emmy said that to me."

Alice Browne ran a slender finger inside the round collar of her blouse. Packing was warm work. The shack was so completely lost in the woods that the sun never got to it. But then, neither did the breeze. And this was one of those sunless, sticky days in early August. Aunt Iselde had had the place built entirely after her own ideas. But when she found she could not live in it she blamed the archi-

"Sure. She treats me like one of the family, already. Gee! these are gorgeous buckles! They were an outrageous price, but they're worth it." A red dress without silver slippers is suicide." She pressed them into a corner of the suitcase.

Alice rolled the bottle of liquid powder into a camisole, and sighed. "It's just like a story. Maybe if I were taken to the club I'd meet somebody who'd take an interest in me and invite me to a house-party."

"Keep your boots on darling. You're only just out of school. If I get to be Mrs. P. D., you'll be invited everywhere. Hope your crepe Roma won't be too short for me," Marianna, although quite a small person, was taller than her sister.

pale oysters. Her riding boots were cracked and grayish. Her blouse had an air of having been once too often to the washing machine.

"It's no shorter than that one."

Marianna regarded her sister's tan one piece dress, which she was wearing. "You know, Alice, I feel like a pig, taking every rag you own. You understand, don't you, that this is all as much for your sake as for mine?"

"It's alright Marianna. These are all I'll need for the butcher boy and Aunt Iselde."

"I guess there'll be room for you in the car Mrs. Martinson is sending up for me. I'll take you as far as the station."

"Lord! Aunt Iselde isn't due for hours!"

what he is! Full of his theories. His pet theory—" she punctuated by jabbing odd bits of lingereie into unresisting corners of the suitcase sprawled open across her bed—"is that women are humored too much. He says that the girl he marries will have to live in the woods. He says he'll never go trailing around after a gorgeous creature and hear people refer to him as "the beautiful Mrs. Duffy's

"Do you call Mrs. Martinson—Emmy?" Alice inquired, handing a pair of silver slippers to her sister.

You never would have guessed there were ten years between them. Alice looked just like Marianna, only more so. Her eyes were bigger and of a more intense blue. Her bobbed hair was curlier and had a burnished cast. Her lashes were longer and her feet were smaller. And she had dimples. She was dressed in a pair of riding breeches that had once been tan, but were not about the color of

"Well, we might as well save the stage fare, and what's the difference whether you loll around here or at the station? We're under big expense this week end—tipping and all. Don't forget you have to market on the way back. Aunt Iselde'll pay for the stuff. She wouldn't like anything I ordered, anyway. Be sure not to get her excited. Devote a little time to her. You know how she is."

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

Alice made a wry face.

"But really, honey, I'm glad she's coming. You know I'd worry if you were alone in the shack with burglars prowling around the neighborhood. They just broke into . . . Darn! There's the phone."

"I'll go."

"No. Let it ring. It's Chubb, and I don't want to talk to him."

"But—"

"No—no. If I talk to him, I'll have to tell him about the house-party and he'll be hanging around and spoiling my act. After I'm gone you can tell him. And when I come back I'll swear our phone wasn't working and I couldn't get him. Is this the only white blouse you have?"

"Muhm. You tore my frilled one the time Chubb took you to the club."

"Of course, I don't like to be mean to Chubb. I'd have died up here if it hadn't been for him. And it wouldn't be any joke if I lost him—especially if I don't make P. D."

"O, but you surely will. Didn't he rave about you?"

"Well, not exactly raved. But Emmy said she'd never heard him say a kind word about a girl in all his twenty-five years. So when he told her my eyes were like a blue lacquer screen—"

"Marianna—don't you think he's too—young for you?"

Marianna flushed over the exertion of smoothing a white skirt. "I don't look a day over twenty-two," she replied defensively, "and that's all that counts—looks."

"But—don't you think he'll mind—being four years younger than you?"

"How's he going to find out? I won't tell him, and certainly nobody up here has ever taken enough interest in us to inquire how old I am."

"But, Marianna, I don't think—However, she changed her mind about telling what she did not think. "I mean I do think it's awfully nice of Mrs. Marttinson to invite you—"

"Probably somebody backed out at to get a girl for P. D. He's such a nut. the last minute. But she really is glad Hates parties and people. He pals around with Joe Carter—their gardener. Emmy says when she wants him to stay at home she has to appropriate his car. That's what she's doing today—pretending she needs it. Emmy's afraid some day he'll do something terrible. He's so frightfully impetuous. She's crazy to see him safely married to any nice girl."

"Is he—handsome?"

"No. He has the kind of nose that catches the sunburn and a sort of wooden face. You never can tell what he's thinking. Not nearly as good looking as Chubb. And he's never done a stroke of work in his life."

"What's the matter with him?"

"O—theories. Has so much money he doesn't see why he should work. Likes to loaf around the woods. Knows every trail around here. Not nearly as human as Chubb. Drat that phone. Makes me so nervous. I know if I talk to Chubb I'll do something idiotic. Is there anything I've forgotten? Stockings?"

"Try not to poke your toe through mine, will you?"

"I won't wear yours unless I have to, darling. You're the only person in the world who makes me feel as if I had big feet. Even P. D. said, 'You don't walk on those, do you? I've a mind to notify the—'"

"You know, Marianna," said Alice earnestly, "you're perfectly welcome to them. I only meant—I won't have any others till the next installment."

Marianna drew a long, deep sigh. "O, lord! Every time I think of an installment want to go out and bind and gag that Duffy man and his outrageous bank account and drag him to the altra. If I do, I'll—well, I'll—well, I'll let you have the whole income! Crutches and all," she added.

Alice laughed. "Don't count your husbands before they are catched."

There was the sound of a motor outside. Marianna dropped the suitcase and rushed to the window. "Alice!" she cried breathlessly—"the car!"

Alice went to tell the man that Miss Browne would be out presently. Marianna meanwhile dabbed at her face with a powder puff, and jammed an Alice blue hat over her brown curls.

"It looks great on you," commented Alice, returning.

Marianna took another look in the mirror.

"I like it better than mine. Isn't it a peach of a car? When you've strapped the bag, carry it out so he won't see this dump. And, dear, try to tidy up before Aunt Iselde looks in. Hope I haven't forgotten anything—bathing suit—tennis racquet—puttse—I'll wear my red tonight and my black tomorrow at the carnival."

"The carnival!" Alice looked up from the strap she was tightening. "I wish I were going."

Marianna was stuffing things into her purse. There was an absent look in her eye.

"If I could just be somewhere and watch it!"

"Fan—sweater—whitewash."

Marianna, if Chubb should ask me, would you mind if I went down and just looked at the carnival?"

"Why, Alice! What would you go in—those?" Alice looked down at the breeches, which were all that remained of her modest wardrobe. "Besides, Chubb won't think of asking you unless you tease. Heavens! How do you think I'd feel if I ran into you standing around like an orphan at a bakery while I was with Emmy—or P. D., or somebody?"

"You wouldn't have to notice me."

"And probably nobody else'd notice you, either! I suppose we don't look so much alike people stop us on the street! Besides, how do you think I'd feel? I've got some feelings! Heavens! You're not nineteen yet! Besides, what is there to an old water carnival?"

"I don't know. I've never been to one."

"It's absolutely nothing but some floats and boats lit up with lanterns and people dressed up. And there's fireworks and afterwards a dance. That's all."

It sounds wonderful!" breathed Alice, "especially the dance."

"Well, you haven't any dance togs in the first place, and Aunt Iselde wouldn't let you go in the second. If things turn out right, you'll have all the clothes and dances your little heart wants. I really feel that one of us owes it to both of us to marry well. Explain to Aunt Iselde about my being away. I know she's a nuisance, but she'll keep you from being alone, at any rate. And do please see that she has a good time."

IT was impossible for Alice to carry out these instructions because Aunt Iselde did not come. Incredible though it seemed, Aunt Iselde was not on that train. Alice, trudging up the short cut to the shack, continued to wrinkle a puzzled brow under the brim of her gray felt hat. Aunt Iselde never disappointed. Alice had nearly missed the return stage, she had been so dazed at first. Afterwards there had come a vast relief—a glorious sense of escape. But now, as she trudged up the dirt road towards the shack, she was conscious of a feeling of emptiness—of desolation.

It was warm and Alice ambled along, in no hurry to reach the empty house. But suddenly she stood perfectly still, her eye caught by something on the dirt road ahead. She drew back a little—at the same time straining her eyes forward. Then, as she hurried on, the thing grew more definitely into what at first she had not believed it could be—an automobile. An automobile in the woods was an occurrence. One lying on its side with its wheels pointing helplessly toward the horizon was positively drama. Alice approached dubiously.

Then once more she drew back and looked around her. However, there was nobody in sight save the man who lay quite still with his face among the ferns near his feet. Alice nerved herself and bent over him. There was a lot of dirt on him, but no blood. Somewhat relieved, she ventured to touch him. He was quite warm. She breathed more freely, and turned him over. Probably because it was the thing to do, she placed her hand about where she thought his heart ought to be. He opened his eyes slowly, and stared in a wooden sort of way at the face so close to his. She drew back and flushed. He closed his eyes again, and Alice strained to hear what he was saying.

"And they try to tell us they all have wings," he murmured.

Alice swung back until she was sitting on her heels. "You're not in heaven," she informed him.

"Yes, I am," he protested feebly, opening his gray eyes again, so long as I think I am."

"Are you hurt?" she inquired starting to get to her feet.

"I will be if you go. Where's Violet?" he demanded suddenly and attempted to sit up. But he sank back, his forehead wrinkled, his eyes closed. "Darn my head," he muttered.

"You must have landed on it," remarked Alice sympathetically.

The idea seemed to amuse him. "Why, yes—thank God. If I'd landed anywhere else, I might have been hurt." He rolled the damaged member until his eye encountered the flivver. "Poor Violet!" he sighed. "Joe's heart will be broken. I give you my word the tree was on the other side of the road and it simply walked across and bumped Violet on the nose. It's a lesson to me. I'll never steal another car."

Alice drew back farther and regarded the young man. He was unshaved, and his clothes, beneath the dirt they had accumulated during his fall, were shabby and soiled. His khaki trousers—his—shoes—his shirt—were all much worn. As for the hat which lay among the ferns, it was the kind of hat wives throw in rubbish cans and husbands rescue and cherish lovingly. A gray, rippled hat which had many shapes but no shape. Alice felt uncomfortable, although she knew, of course, that he wasn't really a thief. It was absurd even to imagine that he might be one of the burglars who were terrorizing the neighborhood. Still—

"You know it's really your fault Violet was hurt." He regarded her accusingly. "I was hurrying to get to you. And you were here all the time," he finished, and a smile tugged crookedly at the corner of his mouth. But his eyes remained as unsmiling as those clear, gray marbles of which no girl ever remembers the name. "It's confusing. And your eyes are much bluer than I remembered," he went on, "and don't you think it queer I should have overlooked the dimples?"

Alice began to figure what she should do with him. However, far rather a delirious patient on her hands than a highwayman or a burglar or something.

"Your eyes are exactly the color of a blue lacquer screen I have. But I told you that before."

Alice wrinkled her brow. Somebody had told her that before—but who? Alice didn't know any men except Marianna's friends, who all believed she was sixteen and treated her accordingly. Now who?

He essayed again to sit up, and she helped him. "Poor Joe," he sighed and rubbed his head. Then he cast an eye over Alice, whose gray hat had fallen off—a calm, rude, stock taking eye. "Was your hair always so red?" he demanded suspiciously.

Alice laughed. "Why—do you mind?"

"No, it's pleasant," he admitted, and rose slowly to his feet. He was not very tall and he was rather thin. But Alice liked the way he looked standing up. She felt that with his face washed and shaved and his straight tan hair brushed he would be good looking. Although his nose was rather large and sunburned.

"Is there anybody around here that could help me turn Violet over?"

"No," replied Alice, "Marianna and I live here alone. Marianna's my sister," she explained, seeing a queer, questioning look in his eye.

"O!" he cried, as though she had told him something overwhelming. "Your sister. Of course. What's your name?"

"Alice," she told him.

"I might have known, with those eyes. My name is Peter."

"Peter what?" she asked.

"Why, haven't you ever heard of me? Peter the Great?"

"Peter the Great What?" she demanded imperturbably and added, "Funny your name should be Peter, too?"

"Why—who else's?"

"Well, my sister's gone off to try and—then, realizing what she was saying—"You don't happen to know a Peter Duffy down at Canawachee, do you?"

"What makes you ask that?"

"O—nothing. Only, do you? He's not of the terribly rich Duffys."

"Why, I'd be the last person in the world to know him," he replied, bending over the flivver. "What about him?"

"Nothing—only somebody I know is thinking of marrying him—he's such a gorgeous catch. But I hope she doesn't."

"Why, don't you like him?"

"O, I've never seen him. But I don't like to think of her going ahead—just because he's rich. Besides, there's somebody else she likes."

He managed to get the hood open, and began poking around the engine.

"You mean your sister doesn't really care about this—this Murphy?"

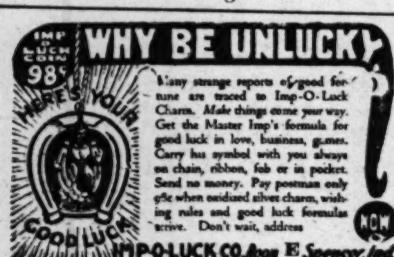

"Who said it was my sister, smarty?" Alice sat down on a rock and watched him. "And his name is Duffy. Isn't that an adorable name—Peter Duffy? But she says he's queer. He'd rather roam around the woods than go to dance and things. Heavens! What's that?"

"That," he explained, picking it from the ground and examining it carefully, "is a gun."

"I know. But I mean, why have you got it?"

"I need it in my business."

Saved by African Pocahontas

By Hayden Church

WITHOUT as much to-do as greets an ordinary traveler, an African explorer has returned to England, and settled down, problem, in an unpretentious flat in London close to Piccadilly. Major Claude Wallace, F. R. G. S., is entitled to a notable place among the men who have shed light on the darkest places in the dark continent.

He has penetrated regions no white man had ever seen, and with perils at every turn has covered 20,000 miles. His discoveries, already known to some extent to the other Fellows of the Royal Geographical Society, which invited him to lecture, justify the redrawing of important parts of the map of Africa.

Major Wallace remains the unknown explorer to the man in the street because he has refused up to now to tell his story in print.

Many of his journeys were made in the interests of a British industrial firm.

In 1913, he started on a secret mission into a country, portions of which no white man before him had seen. He knew the only government near enough to count would not aid him should he be endangered or take action should misadventure befall him. Once, when surrounded by hostile chiefs intent on finding an Englishman to kill, he was saved by a native woman who had followed him into the jungle, after his own carriers had deserted, to tell the tribesmen how his medical skill had saved her from being a life-long invalid.

A few months earlier, his mere arrival on the African coast brought threats from the reichstag and action from the British foreign office and sent German men-of-war to Liberian waters.

Incidentally, as the only soldier to see the battle of Jutland from the maintop of a British dreadnaught—he had a premonition of the battle weeks ahead—Major Wallace was able to give the first accurate report of the engagement.

The unknown explorer is more than fifty years old; he looks forty. Even his jungle wanderings have never given him a day's illness. A direct descendant of Sir William Wallace, the Scotch hero, he was born in England and reared in Ireland. He has spent nearly ten years in Africa—in Liberia, Angola, the French and Belgian Congo, and along the Ivory coast. Soon he will leave for a secluded island off the African coast, where he will put his experiences into a book that, on the strength of a synopsis only, has been snapped up in advance by publishers in England and America.

"I started in January, 1913, on a secret mission to report on the hinterland of Liberia, the negro republic, founded by freed American slaves," Major Wallace said when interviewed.

"Unlimited supplies of raw materials were believed to be awaiting exploitation there. No definite knowledge was available; no map existed. No white man, we were told, had ever seen the district.

"Germany had interests in Liberia. The president of the republic refused me permission to enter the interior except on payment of 10,000 pounds.

Penetrating Regions Which Never Saw a White Man, Major Wallace Faces Death in Gathering of Warring Natives

I communicated with the British foreign office.

PRESSURE was brought to bear. The Liberian republic was out for a loan of 2,000,000 pounds from its four protecting countries, England, Germany, America and France. The republic gave me a document that declared it would not lift a finger should I be endangered. I was to give the republic a map of the country through which I passed.

"Though no one on the coast knew it, a war was being fought by powerful tribes 120 miles in the interior. I returned alive, after friends had given dressed the wound and she again disappeared.

"A fortnight later, I entered the territory of the Webo tribe of the great King Docenu." He laughed at the sound of the name and then added, "You must take these titles seriously; they belong to mighty men. They were at war with the Tucbo tribe. On hearing this my carriers vanished, leaving me alone except for my boy. I was taken to King Docenu's kraal, a straw hut like a corn crib with a dirt floor, where he gave me food, cocoa nuts and palm wine, viciously intoxicating.

"The king told me all his chieftains and warriors, from every village, would hold a palava to hear the

Major Claude Wallace, the unknown explorer, who for the first time tells of his African experiences

"Next day, the palava continued. The witch doctors poked their weird faces at me and the chieftains one by one lifted their stools and left. Glasgow mumbled something that meant the world was not apt to learn much about African jungles from me. I remembered what I had been told about the natives hunting for an Englishman to kill.

"Precisely at this moment the woman whose foot I had cured broke through the ring of warriors and fell before the king, uttering cries. Those who had withdrawn returned. She spoke. Then the throng broke into shouts of praise. My Kroo boy, Glasgow, cried, 'Massa, she save you!'

"This thankful woman evidently had followed to help me if necessary. Having played her part, she slipped away and I never saw her again. But I was allowed to pass unmolested to the great Sutra range, in which rises the Kavalli, and, beyond that, the Niger river."

MAJOR WALLACE was lost in the Devil's forest after finding a pile of human skulls near what appeared to be a cannibal village. He followed a pocket compass for fifty miles before emerging from the jungle, and, though without food for days, survived to cross the Kavalli river and explore the Ivory coast with its sacred peaked mountains. French authorities had advised him not to go there as the natives were wild and dangerous; and these more than lived up to reputation.

"I had to make what you Americans call a 'a quick get-away,'" he said, "swimming the aptly named Crocodile river."

Later he was pursued for miles by two members of the Sierra Leone leopard society, who dress in leopard skins and scratch their victims to death, but he finally reached a coasting steamer.

Africa is not all jungle. Major Wallace once went to the white house, the Liberian executive mansion, which, he says, looks like a summer hotel, I beg to pronounce a gem.

"I want to see the president," he said to the negro at the gate.

"You cannot see him today."

"Why?" asked the explorer.

"Because the white house closes at four o'clock and it's five now." Then the negro glowered at him.

up hope of seeing me, because of a slight interruption in the first day's travel.

"In a village on the Harper Lagoon, Grawy, a native woman with an ugly wound on her foot came up to me. I dressed the wound.

"Imagine my surprise when, surveying one hundred miles away, I met this same woman. My interpreter—a Kroo boy named Glasgow told me she wanted another treatment. I white man's story. The next morning brought thirty chieftains in war paint and at least 1,000 warriors armed with spears, 'knobkerries' (short clubs to crack skulls) and long, narrow shields. I told King Docenu my sole reason for entering his country was to prove the existence of the great palm areas of which I had heard, and to take back knowledge of his beautiful country. My statements were frankly disbelieved.

Pretty Mrs. Violet Thomle Tells Why She Is Asking $100,000 Damages for the Injuries She Claims to Have Suffered When Attacked by the Big Police Dog Owned by Her Once Dearest Friend

PRETTY Mrs. Violet G. Thomle, recently of Minnesota and now of the Hotel Plaza, New York, and wealthy Mrs. Adelaide Moran, wife of a Brooklyn shipbuilder, used to be the very nearest and dearest of friends.

And such friends they probably would have continued all their lives except for the sudden distaste for Mrs. Thomle which the pride and pet of the Moran family is said to have developed.

That pride and pet is a large, handsome and very masterful German police dog named Major. He is the beloved property of Mrs. Moran.

One day last January Mrs. Moran drove in her handsome Rolls Royce over to the Plaza in New York to take tea with her best friend, Mrs. Thomle. By the time tea was over the conversation had become so interesting that Mrs. Moran begged Mrs. Thomle to drive back to Brooklyn with her and continue their talk at a sociable little dinner in Mrs. Moran's boudoir.

Mrs. Thomle thought this a delightful way to pass the evening. She changed to another gown, stepped into her friend's car and rode to Brooklyn. And within ten minutes after setting foot in the Moran mansion something happened which has changed the whole course of Mrs. Thomle's life and probably ruined forever a friendship of years' standing.

Mrs. Thomle alleges that the dog Major, in a sudden fit of temperament, attacked her. It sprang like a wolf at her throat, she says, sinking its teeth and claws deep into her flesh.

As a result of the attack Mrs. Thomle charges the dog made on her she is suing its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Moran, for $100,000 damages. This is believed to be the largest sum ever demanded in the American courts for injuries alleged to have been inflicted on a guest by one of the host's pets.

"It all came about so suddenly," says Mrs. Thomle in describing the experience on which she bases her suit. "Mr. Moran was away and Mrs. Moran had planned that she and her sister, Miss Carr, and I would have a snug little dinner party all by ourselves.

"When we reached the Remsen street mansion of the Morans we found the decorators in possession, but they had finished Mrs. Moran's suite on the second floor. She showed us into her newly done bedroom and we admired her beautiful glazed chintzes, her new lace bedspread, the rich carpets and costly bric-a-brac which made this boudoir quite the dearest thing you ever saw.

"But there were other things I admired even more than the fittings. These were the two high-bred dogs, the special pets of Mrs. Moran. After we had entered she went to wash her hands, while I sat on a lacquer bench at the foot of her bed. Miss Carr was telephoning.

"THE dogs came in, craving attention. The lapdog I petted first. He was a darling. Then Major, the German police dog, came in. After he had submitted with apparent good nature to a little of my petting he went to find his mistress.

"Probably a minute or two passed in silence, and then suddenly I heard an ugly growl like that of a wild animal loose and ferocious. I raised my head just in time to see Major's powerful body leave the floor in a mighty bound and hurl itself toward me through the bathroom door. The dog was jumping at my throat!

"I know I will never outlive the terror of that moment. The contrast between the soft surroundings of that charming bedroom and the wolfish cries of that dog as he snapped at my throat was too horrifying.

"Oh, take him off—take him off—take him away from me," I begged as his great teeth sank into my bosom and imbedded themselves deeply into my flesh. I could feel the flesh tear as his fangs took a firmer and firmer grip.

"By this time, of course, Mrs. Moran had come running. Miss Carr also grabbed at the dog. They both screamed loudly, but for several minutes it was two women against a brute whose strength was more than a match for a dozen. Meantime, I felt hot moisture trickling down; I felt something slimy on my feet, and I saw that Mrs. Moran and Miss Carr were spattered with my blood. It was too terrible.

"After what seemed ages I heard help coming—the Chinese cook and workmen from downstairs. I don't know how many of these men it took to one of the family? Why did it have to be poor Vi, who has just come out of the hospital? Poor Mrs. Moran was so distressed that I tried to reassure her.

"Don't worry, my dear," I said, while all down my body I could feel the warm ooze of blood.

"They bundled a great fur coat over my torn and blood-stained dress and carried me in the family limousine to the compensation doctor Mr. Moran uses for industrial accidents among his workmen. When he saw me he shook his head. Ether was out of the question, because I was not yet recovered from a severe surgical operation of a month past. So I had to sit on the operating table and have the wounds cauterized and disinfected and sewn together without any anesthetic.

"Each of you ladies take one of Mrs. Thomle's hands," the doctor ordered. They obeyed. I turned my head so I would not see the raw tears in my flesh. Bit by bit, patiently and painfully, I felt the doctor pulling out the bits of my clothing which had become enmeshed in the torn flesh. He said that

A POLICE DOG'S MURDEROUS ATTACK

This remarkable photograph shows a police dog, valued at $1,500, springing, at a word of command from its master, at a man's throat. The highly developed watch-dog instinct of this same dog recently saved its owner from serious injury or perhaps death, when he was attacked by a desperate highwayman to separate me from my savage assailant, but at last I knew the dog's grip was lessening. I knew they were pulling him away because I could feel my flesh being torn outward as his jaws were drawn from my breast. At last I was freed. I sat back, my eyes closed, saying a little prayer for my deliverance.

"Mrs. Moran was circling about the bedroom crying, 'Oh, why didn't it happen to me? Why not at least an artery had been severed and this was why I had bled so profusely. Suddenly Mrs. Moran let go my hand and told the doctor she was fainting.

"All right," he said; "go over there on the carpet and do it quietly. I'll bring you to when I've time."

"Mrs. Moran walked away, half knelt, half fell on the rug and fainted. The doctor got out his needle to stitch my wounds. Then it was Miss

Mrs. Violet G. Thomle, who is suing a wealthy Brooklyn, N. Y., man and his wife for $100,000 damages

Carr who cried, as her sister had done: "Doctor—doctor—I'm going!"

"All right," he said again; "go lie down and be as quiet as you can."

"The next moment two women lay unconscious on the floor. The doctor finished stitching up my flesh. When that was done he said: 'Well, now, let's revive the fallen.'

"We were taken back to the Moran home. After all the excitement was over I was weak. I tried to go home, but was not able to take a step. So they put me to bed, where I lay for ten days. After that, of course, came the tedious trips to the Brooklyn doctor from the Plaza hotel and the weary ministrations of a nurse and masseuse.

"Now, even at this I would have allowed the matter to drop, except for my dread of rabies—hydrophobia. That dog, I reasoned, must have been mad or he would not have attacked me, the friend of his mistress. I have been friends with dogs all my life and never before had any trouble with one.

"My fear of rabies mounted, and at last I felt that I must ask Mrs. Moran if she had had the dog examined. I wrote—she never answered. My husband wrote begging her to tell us the present condition of the dog. If he showed signs of madness, he explained, he thought the dog should be killed and his brain examined. It was too bad, but a human life is worth more than a dog's.

"NOT one of our communications could break the curt silence. It was then that I started suit for $100,000 damages. I would not suffer as I have suffered and still am suffering for many times that much money. The physical part of it is the least painful. I have received a shock which causes me incessant nightmare. # Behind the Scenes With the

DURING the more than thirty years he stood guard over the stage door of the famous old Gaiety Theater in London, James Jupp saw many remarkable things but none was more extraordinary than the swift, Cinderella-like transformation which a chorus girl often underwent so soon after taking her place in the theater's array of beauties.

Many of the recruits to the Gaiety's chorus came, like Gertie Millar, from the home of humble working people. Until their youth and beauty attracted the attention of Manager George Edwardes they had been earning their living in stores or mills and sometimes in domestic service.

When they stepped through the stage door for the first time they were not at all well dressed and often their clothes were positively shabby. Usually they were shy, timid little things, quite inexperienced with life and love, nervous over their prospects of success on the stage and dazzled by the strong light of publicity that began to shine on them the instant they were engaged for the Gaiety.

But within a few weeks, frequently within a few days after beginning their new and strange life, they were marvelously transformed by the magic that the Gaiety's footlights seemed to possess more than any others.

The cheap, ill-fitting often shabby clothes of the working girl would give place to Paris gowns and coats of ermine and sable. Diamonds gleamed on their once toil-stained fingers and rare pearls encircled their now snow-white throats.

They no longer came and went on foot, but in luxurious carriages or motor cars, with men in livery to drive them. And always there were men of wealth and title to shower them with flowers, bonbons and other gifts and to vie with one another for the privilege of escorting them wherever they might wish to go.

Even when these beginners came from positions in life where they had been able to afford fine clothes and jewels they were able to deck themselves in still finer ones very soon after their charms had been revealed for the first time to the thousands of appraising eyes that were continually watching the Gaiety stage.

But these girls who became queens of wealth and luxury almost over night, who were transformed almost as magically as Cinderella herself, did not all attain the lasting happiness that came to the little heroine of the fairy story.

IN the book of reminiscences which James Jupp, the keeper of the Gaiety stage door, has recently published there are many incidents calculated to disillusion the girl who thinks the life of a famous footlight beauty always a perfectly safe and easy road to luxury, wealth and love.

"There was a beautiful girl who came to us when she was about twenty-two years of age," says Mr. Jupp. "I won't say she used the Gaiety to find a husband, but I remember she left the stage because she believed she was in love, and afterwards regretted the fact.

"The swift, Cinderella-like transformation of many a Gaiety beauty—changed almost over night from a timid and shabbily clothed working girl into a proud queen of luxury, wealth and fashion."

She was a tall, fine looking girl, with a lot of fair hair and a soft, sweet voice, and was a mannequin in a West End establishment.

"If I gave you its name you would all know it and many of you would remember the name of the girl, too. The establishment is patronized by people of great wealth, and naturally the mannequin came into contact with them.

"She was a sweet, unspoiled girl, but so remarkable was her beauty and so vivid her personality that My Lady This and My Lady That would talk of her, and at one period, if the subject of beauty cropped up in the fashionable West End, one would be sure to hear this mannequin cited as the most beautiful girl in London.

"She became the topic of the smart club and Park Lane drawing rooms, and it was not surprising that her fame reached the theatrical agents. At last one of them went to her and said that he could get her a job at the Gaiety.

"It was a long time before she could be persuaded that the offer was made in earnest, and when she agreed she looked upon it more as a joke than anything else, and stipulated that she would still follow her work as mannequin.

"George Edwardes, upon the application of the agent, agreed to see her, and after one took offered a position. He was amazed when she stated that she still wanted to keep her mannequin job during the daytime, but, thinking that the whim would soon pass, he consented.

"So this young girl, who could have become one of George Edwardes' greatest stars, paraded exclusive creations before aristocratic West End ladies in the daytime and at night appeared in yet more gorgeous gowns at the Gaiety.

"For a little while she was not affected by the great success she met from her first appearance. She would come quietly and go quietly. But very soon my little office began to swarm with floral tributes for her and invitations to supper.

"She seemed amazed at the furore she created and at first refused to have anything to do with her admirers. Of course, her reserve attracted them the more, and one evening she drove up to the theater with an enormously wealthy Italian count. This nobleman had haunted the stage door for days and days, until at last he had found a mutual friend who had introduced him to our new girl.

"I think the Count swept her off her feet. I heard that she had relinquished her job as mannequin, and soon one of our Gaiety girls told me that she had become engaged to the foreigner. Very soon she was literally covered with the most costly jewels and her gowns were equal to any of the wonderful creations she had worn on the stage or in the fashionable West End establishment.

"There was a sensation over a magnificent ermine coat she had been seen wearing on one or two occasions, and there was a lot of discussion in the girls' dressing room as to what it had cost.

"I made a guess and backed my judgment with a small sum. Eventually there were quite a number of bets resting upon the price of coat and I was deputed to get the sum settled.

"I was very friendly with the beauty and the next time she ar

The Story of BEAUTY and the BEAST

By Jane Corby

A rich merchant had three daughters—
Two were cross and very mean,
But the youngest was both gentle
And as lovely as a queen.
Soon the father lost his riches,
And he had to go away,
Seeking work (he needed money, Having many bills to pay).

"And what shall I bring you, daughters,
When I can come home again?"
"Bring us jewels and silken dresses," Cried out the two daughters then.

But sweet Beauty stood quite silent Till her father said, "And you?"
"Oh," said she, "I want just one rose, Father; just a rose—I do."
Well, the father then departed,
And a whole year soon went by,
While he won new wealth and fortune,
Buying all the gifts thereby.

All except the rose for Beauty—
That could not be found at all;
So he started homeward, missing
His way in a forest tall.
But he found a splendid palace.
And when he had gone inside,
There were tables full of fine food—
Cake, and wine, and lots beside.
So he ate, and going onward,
Found a garden, all a-bloom—
"Ha," cried he, "a rose for Beauty!"
"Wait!" he heard a stern voice boom.
"You are stealing my fine flowers;
When I fed you so well, too,"
Cried a dreadful beast, with great horns,
Who came swiftly into view.

Well, the merchant told his story
And the Beast said, "You shall die
If you don't bring Beauty to me."
Tears fell from the father's eye.

He went home and told his daughter,
And oh—it was sad to see!
"I will go to him, dear Father," Beauty said, "now please let me."

So she entered the Beast's palace,
And she lived there quite a year,
Then said she, "Will you allow me
To see my own father dear?"

She went home, with great rejoicing,
And remained there quite a while,
Till she had a dream that showed her
The poor Beast, without a smile.

Hurrying back to the palace,
She found he was nearly dead.
"I could not live on without you,"
He said; "I will die instead."

"No," cried Beauty, "for I love you,
And indeed I'll marry you."
Then, where once the Beast stood, Stood a prince with eyes of blue.
"I was spellbound," he said, gayly,
"Till a maiden fair should say,
I will marry you—though ugly,
And you have said that today."

So was Beauty well rewarded
All because she kindly chose
For a gift from her poor father—
Just a simple little rose.

A PAGE FOR BOYS and GIRLS

A STORY OF A MODERN, SENSIBLE LITTLE BO-PEEP

Maisie used sometimes to think of herself as a modern sort of Little Bo Peep, because every day of the warm summer weather she spent down in the meadow watching her flock of sheep. Maisie's brothers had all grown up and gone away, so in the spring her father had told her that if she, with Sheep, her dog, would take care of the flock during vacation, she could call the little lambs her own and when they grew up and were sheared or sold, the money should be all hers.

Unlike Little Bo Peep, however, who really must have been a stupid creature to let her sheep stray, Maisie kept a watchful eye on hers. When she took a book along to read, she always stopped at the bottom of every page, no matter how exciting the story, and counted the woolly backs to see that all were there.

One murky, sultry afternoon, Maisie, with the sheep about her, was down by the brook in the center of the pasture when the shepherdess looked up and then jumped up at sight of a dark, swirling cloud that was traveling rapidly over the hills from the southwest, in a direction toward her and the animals.

"A tornado!" was her instant thought. "If it passes over our heads the sheep will become frightened! What if it should come down to earth?" For a moment she was paralyzed. Then she recalled that tornadoes, she had heard, usually travel in a straight path. Since she was in its track, she must move before it caught her. She snatched her big stick and quickly began prodding the sheep toward the northwest corner of the pasture. The tornado appeared to be a baby one, perhaps only a few hundred feet across, and she guessed it would sweep the pasture from the southwest to the northeast. On the opposite side, where she was headed, would probably be safety. She had never seen a tornado before, the only one that had come near their home having happened when she was quite small, but she had heard all about how they behaved.

Maisie gave no thought to her wide-brimmed hat that lay behind on the grass, but ran from one side of the flock to the other, goading them on, and occasionally turning to see the monster cloud in a fan-shaped streamer, drawing nearer.

In the corner end of the lot, Maisie crouched under the groaning trees with the sheep. The tornado came with a rush and a roar and just as it reached the meadow, by the very spot where the sheep had grazed, it did what tornadoes often do—dipped to earth. Maisie and the sheep were out of its path by fifty yards.

Maisie watched the gyrating whirlwind go rippling along toward the farmhouse, and she held her breath. It passed to the right, barely missing the structure. As soon as it was gone, a figure in blue shirt hurried out of the door toward the field. Maisie ran to meet her father. "Child, are you safe?" he cried. "Your mother and I feared for you, for as the tornado passed us, fragments of your hat fell into the yard."

"Yes," Maisie answered. "I'm all right, and here are the sheep, too, wagging their tails behind them."

A FAMOUS, DARING ANIMAL BANDIT

The mention of famous bandits, ungallant though they are, never fails to thrill a reader. But rivals of Jesse James and other desperadoes of history are some master thieves of the animal world, wolves who have had national reputations for their thievery and daring shiftiness.

"Old Three Toes," of southwestern Texas, was a murderer of the first order. He had to his credit terrific losses in sheep and stock and his name was a terror for hundreds of miles. "Old King Neck," of Kansas, and the famous Wyoming Wolf, were others known to trappers' history.

Old Blue Is Latest

The latest, and a baffling fellow he is, is Old Blue, the leader of a wolf pack in Prairie county, Arkansas. His lair is in a cypress swamp northeast of Little Rock. He is the king of lupine outlaws. For strength, boldness, and uncanny shrewdness he cannot be matched. It seems that he leads a charmed life, for he has cunningly withstood guns, poison, traps and wolfhounds that have been used to seek his life vainly.

Day by day he has pursued his murderous work in a strikingly bold manner. A farmer who is the nearest neighbor of Old Blue has suffered greatly at the wolf's hands. He recounts that once in broad daylight he saw the animal jump into a corral where some goats were herded, snatch a goat and drag it right over the wall and disappear.

The task of getting this bandit is made harder because the hunting dogs become useless if they are taken into the cypress bottom after dusk. They seem to sense that they are in danger and they stall on the trail.

Of Course

Student: "Fourth floor, please."

Elevator man: "Here's your station, son."

Student: "How dare you call me son? You're not my father."

Elevator man: "Well, I brought you up, didn't I?"

IN SNOPPYQUOP LAND

WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

This peculiar species of Snopy is a common sight nowadays, as he wends his weary way around the missing links, muttering meaningless nothings while he plays the Ancient and Horrible pastime—Golf.

Instead of his eye, he keeps his nose on the ball. His nose knows, too, which way the little ball will roll and his score card shows that it won't be far. The tanke feet enable him to cross the yawning chasms and gaping gulfs which form a prominent part of the battle of Bunker Hill. He is not a timid Snopy, yet none but the brave deserve the fair way and he simply can't seem to get out of the rough.

Barrie is reaching into the pocket of his golf bag for his golf hanky, with which to dust off the T, and blow his driver, I mean his nose. The T is a Snopyquop invention, and is much better than the coffee used by many golfers to keep awake when they play. Golfsyquop's wife is a golf widow and could easily find T-grounds for divorce.

The Snopycaddy in the background watches Barrie to see that he doesn't lose his head in a sand trap.

Not at All

Mother—"Calvin, you've been fighting again! You've lost your front teeth!"

Calvin (taking a little package from his pocket)—"No, I haven't, mother; here they are."

Most Useful

Teacher—"What is the most prominent woman's club in America?"

Pupil—"The rolling pin."

wearing the ermine coat, I told her about the bets we had made regarding the cost and asked her to settle the matter.

"For a moment she looked amazed, but then burst out into laughter and said: "Of course I will tell you, Jupp.

There is no secret about it, and, as I am going to marry the Count and am very much in love with him, I am sure he won't mind. The coat cost 3,000 guineas ($15,000). It was a much larger sum than I had estimated, but I won my bet.

"That incident led to a further conversation and I could tell that the girl was deeply in love with the man who professed so great an admiration for her and loaded her with presents. I really believe that she knew very little of the world when she first came to the Gaiety, and I ask you whether one girl in a thousand, suddenly transformed from a mannequin to a Gaiety favorite, would have kept her head any more than she?

"The car she rode in, also a present from the wealthy Count, was a perfect wonder. Although the girl never got beyond the ranks of the show girls at the Gaiety, I have seen stars whose names were blazoned outside the theater look with astonishment and envy as the one-time mannequin stepped from her royal car and passed on to her humble dressing room.

"One evening she did not check in at her usual time and we had given her up, when she dashed in excited and out of breath.

"Before the show was over word went around that she was not coming back. That night I missed seeing her, but next day I heard that she had canceled her contract with the Gaiety.

"I learned that the Italian Count had persuaded her to go on a yachting trip with him, and, loving and trustful as she was, the one-time mannequin had thrown up everything at his behest. The next time I heard from her she had landed at a fashionable Italian watering place—and then there was a long silence.

"One morning I was taking down a telephone message when a girl walked into my office and stood quietly while I completed my business. As I replaced the receiver I looked at her and my mind was stirred by vague memories. She was dressed quietly in a serge costume which had lost its smartness, and as I looked at her more closely I saw that she was haggard and worn.

"She did not speak for a moment and I vainly tried to place her. Then she smiled, and in a moment I knew her. Here, stripped of all her finery, her once sparkling eyes dimmed with weariness of life, was the beautiful mannequin who might have become a Gaiety star.

"'Yes, Jupp, I have come back,' she said in the quiet voice I knew so well, 'and I want you to help me.'

THEN she sat down, and without any hysteria or passionate tears, but with a pained note in her voice which hurt me more than anything else, she told me what had occurred. 'I suppose I was too simple and believed too readily,' she said simply.

"Then she told me how, on arrival in Italy, the Count had turned out not to be so generous as everybody in London believed him to be. 'That would not have mattered to me,' she went on, nature recoil upon itself. Such a recoil is like that of a hair, made to grow out from the body, turning unnaturally upon the direction of its growth and growing into the body—a rankling, festering thing of hurt. And so with White Fang. Every urge of his being impelled him to spring upon the pack that cried at his heels, but it was the will of the gods that this should be; and behind the will, to enforce it, was the whip of caribou-gut with its biting thirty-foot lash. So White Fang could only eat his heart in bitterness and develop a hatred and malice commensurate with the ferocity and indomitability of his nature.

If ever a creature was the enemy of its kind, White Fang was that creature. He asked no quarter, gave none. He was continually marred and scarred by the teeth of the pack, and as continually he left his own marks upon the pack. Unlike most leaders who, when camp was made and the dogs were unhitched, huddled near to the gods for protection, White Fang disdained such protection. He walked boldly about the camp, inflicting punishment in the night for what he had suffered in the day. In the time before he was made leader of the team, the pack had learned to get out of his way. But now it was different. Excited by the day-long pursuit of him, swayed subconsciously by the insistent iteration on their brains of the sight of him feeling away, mastered by the feeling of mastery enjoyed all day, the dogs could not bring themselves to give way to him. When he appeared amongst them, there was always a squabble. His progress was marked by snarl and snap and growl. The very atmosphere he breathed was surcharged with hatred and malice, and this but served to increase the hatred and malice within him.

When Mit-sah cried out his command for the team to stop, White Fang obeyed. At first this caused trouble for the other dogs. All of them would spring upon the hated leader, only to find the tables turned. Behind him would be Mit-sah, the great whip singing in his hand. So the dogs came to understand that when the team stopped by order, White Fang was to be let alone. But when White Fang stopped without orders, then it was allowed them to spring upon him and destroy him if they could. After several experiences White Fang never stopped without orders. He learned quickly. It was in the nature of things that he must learn quickly, if he were to survive the unusually severe conditions under which life was vouchsafed him.

But the dogs could never learn the lesson to leave him alone in camp. Each day, pursuing him and crying defiance at him, the lesson of the previous night was erased, and that night would have to be learned over again, to be as immediately forgotten. Besides, there was a greater consistence in their dislike of him.

B. J. LANE, 216 Lane Bldg., St. Marys, Ohio

They sensed between themselves and him a difference of kind—cause sufficient in itself for hostility. Like him, they were domesticated wolves. But they had been domesticated for generations. Much of the Wild had been lost, so that to them the Wild was the unknown, the terrible, the ever menacing and ever warring. But to him, in appearance and action and impulse, still clung the Wild. He symbolized it, was its personification; so that when they showed their teeth to him they were defending themselves against the powers of destruction that lurked in the shadows of the forest and in the dark beyond the camp-fire.

But there was one lesson the dogs did learn, and that was too keep together. White Fang was too terrible for any of them to face single-handed. They met him with the mass formation, otherwise he would have killed them, one by one, in a night. As it was, he never had a chance to kill them. He might roll a dog off its feet, but the pack would be upon him before he could follow up and deliver the deadly throat-stroke. At the first hint of conflict the whole team drew together and faced him. The dogs had quarrels among themselves, but these were forgotten when trouble was brewing with White Fang.

On the other hand, try as they would, they could not kill White Fang. He was too quick for them, too formidable, too wise. He avoided tight places and always backed out of it when they bade fair to surround him. While, as for getting him off his feet, there was no dog among them capable of doing the trick. His feet clung to earth with the same tenacity that he clung to life. For that matter, life and footing were synonymous in this unending warfare with the pack, and none knew it better than White Fang.

So he became the enemy of his kind, domesticated wolves that they were, softened by the fires of man, weakened in the sheltering shadow of man's strength. White Fang was bitter and implacable. The clay of him was so molded. He declared a vendetta against all dogs. And so terribly did he live this vendetta that Gray Beaver, fierce savage himself, could not but marvel at White Fang's ferocity. Never, he swore, had there been the like of this animal; and the Indians in strange villages swore likewise when they considered the tale of his killings amongst their dogs.

When White Fang was nearly five years old, Gray Beaver took him on another great journey, and long remembered was the havoc he worked amongst the dogs of the many villages along the Mackenzie, across the Rockies, and down the Porcupine to the Yukon. He revelled in the vengeance he wreaked upon his kind. They were ordinary, unsuspecting dogs. They were not prepared for his swiftness and directness, for his attack without warning. They did not know him for what he was, a lightning-flash of slaughter. They bristled up to him, stiff-legged and challenging, while he, wasting no time on elaborate preliminaries, snapping into action like a steel spring, was at their throats and destroying them before they knew what was happening and while they were yet in the throes of surprise.

He became an adept at fighting. He economized. He never wasted his strength, never fussed. He was in too quickly for that, and, if he missed, was out again too quickly. The dislike of the wolf for close quarters was his to an unusual degree. He could not endure a prolonged contact with another body. It smacked of danger. It made him frantic. He must be away, free, on his own legs, touching no living thing. It was the Wild still clinging to him, asserting itself through him. This feeling had been accentuated by the Ishmaelite life he had led from his puppyhood. Danger lurked in contacts. It was the trap, ever the trap, the fear of it lurking deep in the life of him, woven into the fibre of him.

In consequence, the strange dogs he encountered had no chance against him. He eluded their fangs. He got them, or got away, himself untouched in either event. In the natural course of things there were exceptions to this. There were times when several dogs, pitching on to him, punished him before he could get away; and there were times when a single dog scored deeply on him. But these were accidents. In the main so efficient a fighter had he become, he went away unscathed.

Another advantage he possessed was that of correctly judging time and distance. Not that he did this consciously, however. He did not calculate such things. It was all automatic. His eyes saw correctly, and the nerves carried the vision correctly to his brain. The parts of him were better adjusted than those of the average dog. They worked together more smoothly and steadily. His was a better, far better, nervous, mental, and muscular coordination. When his eyes conveyed to his brain the moving image of an action, his brain, without conscious effort, knew the space that limited that action and the time required for its completion. Thus, he could avoid the leap of another dog, or the drive of its fangs, and at the same moment could seize the infinitesimal fraction of time in which to deliver his own attack. Body and brain, his was a more perfected mechanism. Not that he was to be praised for it. Nature had been more generous to him than the average animal, that was all.

It was in the summer that White Fang arrived at Fort Yukon. Gray Beaver had crossed the great watershed between the Mackenzie and the Yukon in the late winter, and spent the spring in hunting among the western outlying spurs of the Rockies. Then, after the break-up of the ice on the Porcupine, he had built a canoe and paddled down that stream to where it effected its junction with the Yukon just under the Arctic circle. Here stood the old Hudson Bay company fort; and here were many Indians, much food, and unprecedented excitement. It was the summer of 1898, and thousands of gold-hunters were going up the Yukon to Dawson and the Klondike. Still hundreds of miles from their goal, nevertheless many of them had been on the way for a year, and the least any of them had travelled to get that far was five thousand miles, while some of them had come from the other side of the world.

HERE Gray Beaver stopped. A whisper of the gold-rush had reached his ears, and he had come with several bales of furs, and another of gut-sewn mittens and moccasins. He would not have ventured so long a trip had he not expected generous profits. But what he had expected was nothing to what he realized. His wildest dream had not exceeded a hundred per cent profit; he made a thousand per cent. And like a true Indian he settled down to trade carefully and slowly, even if it took all summer and the rest of the winter to dispose of his goods.

It was at Fort Yukon that White Fang saw his first white men. As compared with the Indians he had known, they were to him another race of beings, a race of superior gods. They impressed him as possessing superior power, and it is on power that god-head rests. White Fang did not reason it out, did not in his mind make the sharp generalization that the white gods were more powerful. It was a feeling, nothing more, and yet none the less potent. As, in his puppyhood, the looming bulk of the tepees, man-reared, had affected him as manifestations of power, so was he

'but other things occurred, and I saw him in his true light. It was the shock of my life, and I thought my heart was broken when I discovered that his love for me had been only pretense.'

"Gradually I learned the full facts, and it turned out that the man who had loaded her with costly presents and whom she expected to marry had left her stranded in an Italian resort. She was in a fashionable hotel when she discovered the desertion, and, to her consternation she found that practically all her valuable jewelry was gone.

"It may have been the work of some hotel thief, but, be that as it may, nothing was recovered, and, with only a little money, she returned to London.

"The 'Guv'nor' always had a high regard for her and he consented to give her an engagement with one of his touring companies."

But they look like barges in these sneaks."

"You don't walk on those, do you? Aren't you afraid of the S. P. C. F.?"

She looked at him curiously. "Did you say that to me before, Peter?"

"Very likely. It's part of my act." He put away the 10 o'clock and lowered the flame under the bacon. Alice filled two glasses with cold water.

"Alice, he remarked across the pile of club sandwiches, "do you realize we're falling in love with each other?"

"I know—I mean—Oh, Peter!" It was hard with a mouthful of sandwich.

"It's very pleasant, don't you think? I've never had it before."

"Neither have I."

"I think it's going to take, don't you?"

"Why, I don't—we don't know anything about each other—"

"That's not so. I know all about you."

"But I—Peter, tell me who you are."

"What difference would that make?"

"It—I—Oh, Peter, won't you tell me?"

"No," answered Peter deliberately, "I want to test you. If you really are in love with me it oughtn't to matter who I am. And if you aren't—well, it certainly won't matter."

"Peter, you're awfully silly. Of course I'm not in love with you."

"I don't believe you."

"You can't love anybody you don't know anything about."

"Why, you poor—I was in love with you the minute I saw you. In fact, before I ever saw you. Look here, Alice, can you look me in the left eye and say you're not in love with me?"

"Well—I—"

"I knew it. I think we ought to get engaged, don't you?"

"I do not. Most certainly—"

"Oh, well, that's what I get for consulting you. Little Cinderalice isn't used to considerate treatment and doesn't know how to respond to it."

Alice laughed. "Imagine being engaged to a man you don't know a thing about!"

"You mean you don't know my name. As for the rest, I've money enough so you won't have to worry about incomes. I've read enough so you won't have to be ashamed of me, although I didn't go to college. Because I don't believe in them. I haven't the best reputation, I'll admit, but then I've never gone after that sort of thing. And my family has plenty for all of us. And I've never made love to another girl in my life. Now you know all about me. Will you marry me—some day?"

"Why, Peter—I don't know—yet."

"When will you know?"

"Peter stop being silly. How can I tell?"

"Madam, no woman can play fast and loose with me. I'll give you another day. And if you can't think up any good reason for not marrying me I—well, I don't believe in humorizing a woman to death. How'd you like to take a drive?"

He had driven the car straight into the barn the night before. Alice saw it now for the first time. It was a low, blue racer.

"Peter!" she exclaimed. "What a dream!" Then with reluctant suspicion: "Is it yours?"

"No," he admitted, "it isn't."

"Whose?"

"Yours."

"Goose! Where'd you get it?"

"What difference does that make? You mustn't look a gift automobile in the headlights. Do you know how to drive?"

She did not, and in spite of her protest to him not to be silly, he insisted on teaching her. "Because a car is like a wife. Not a darn bit of pleasure unless you know how to run them." Alice couldn't make head or tail of him, but neither could she argue with him. Besides, she had always wanted to learn to run a car. Altogether it was the most heavenly afternoon. He left her at the shack at six.

"You don't mind if I use your car? I'll be back in time to take you to the carnival."

"The carnival," she gasped.

"Yes, Cinderalice. And I'll try for a dress as near the color of your eyes as I can get it and a cape and slippers the size of stunted walnut shells. I'd stay and scramble you some eggs, only if I don't show up at a certain place before seven, they'll have the sheriff after me. Alice, don't you think I might kiss you good-by?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Why, because."

"If that's the only reason!" He climbed out of the car and she fled up the path. "Stop!" he cried as she made for the door of the shack. "I won't kiss you against your will—yet. I haven't enough technique. I'll be back early," and he climbed back into the car and was gone.

She knew the whole affair was the craziest thing in the world—just something out of a dream—a temporary aberration, which had no connection with real life—which, in fact, couldn't be happening. And still, when he returned she was not surprised. Even the gray cape and the Periwinkle blue dress that was only a little too big, did not really startle her. Anything could happen in connection with Peter. But Marianna's slippers did give her a jolt. There was no mistaking them, there was not another pair like them.

But one might as well go through with it, having gone this far, Alice reflected, as she stuffed a wad of tissue paper into the toe. Undoubtedly he had stolen the clothes. But Alice was too excited—too happy—to worry much about it. She was going to the water carnival! And with him! Nothing else mattered. And afterwards they were going to dance at the casino. She would have preferred the club, of course, but as he pointed out, everybody who belonged would be at the club. But only outsiders would be at the casino, and they could duck out before slumming parties began arriving from the club.

Peter stuffed the gingham dress and the slacks into the back of the car and Alice took along a big, dark blue veil in case she were suddenly confronted with detection. But Peter said the chances were small because there were hundreds of boats on the lake.

It was certainly a wonderful night. Warm, with a small moon and not much breeze. Driving down in the blue racer, Alice had strong qualms about the clothes. But she would be very, very careful of them. Perhaps if the owners knew how much this one evening meant to her, they wouldn't mind. Tomorrow she would have a good serious talk with Peter and make him tell her the absolute truth about everything. And then they'd both stop doing foolish things. Peter would do anything for her, she was sure.

They stopped a short way from the village, and he turned down a little bypath, leaving the car in the woods. "I had to steal this and hide it," he said, picking up a canoe and carrying it to the water, "so's to be sure we'd have one—"

Alice said nothing. Tomorrow would be time enough.

She kept the blue veil ready, but did not see Marianna. They stayed on the outside fringe of the flock of miscellaneous boats that surrounded the floats. Mrs. Martinson's party were probably in the heart of things.

The crowd at the casino was rather rough, but so numerous that Alice and Peter were almost as much cut off as if they had been alone. He wasn't a wonderful dancer, by any means. But, good or bad, it was more fun dancing with him than with anybody in the wide world. She knew her eyes were shameless when she looked at him. But nobody was noticing. Most of the others were even worse.

The huge casino had low windows leading to a porch that extended around three sides. To many of the couples the spooning privileges alone were worth the admission fee. Alice and Peter climbed through the windows with the rest, and he sat with his arm round her waist on the railing overlooking the lake. It was fairly dark. After the fourth dance he kissed her. Also after all the others. Alice was glad they had not gone to the club.

He suggested finally that it was growing late. Alice wanted one more dance. The orchestra played a waltz. Alice did not feel as if she were dancing—but swimming around in time to the music—as if he and she were not two people—but one—deliciously blended.

Suddenly she uttered an exclamation of dismay, and clutched Peter's arm. And the next thing he knew she had bolted through the nearest window, one of the silver pumps remaining behind her on the floor. And then he was standing there with the slipper in his hand. And Marianna, looking beautiful in a black dress without any sleeves, was coming toward him from the door.

MARIANNA had a bit of a temper. But this time she had plenty of cause. She had been having a miserable time. Certainly Peter Duffy's behavior had been inexcusable. Except during dinner, she had seen nothing whatever of him, although she had been invited to his home on his account. He had simply absented himself the whole two days. Tonight he had disappeared immediately after dinner. And here he was, dancing at the casino! She could have slapped him when she saw him standing there with his wooden face and... Yes, actually... her silver slipper in his hand! She could not have mistaken it anywhere. She done without too many lunches for those buckles.

"Well, of all the!" she cried, finding her voice—"that's my slipper!"

"This?" he inquired in an injured tone, slipping it hastily behind him, "O, no. This belongs to the young lady who just—" he pointed rather foolishly in the direction of the window. And Marianna, turning, received an even greater shock.

"Why—that's Alice—" she began, starting forward toward a shadowy face, which had instantly been withdrawn.

He stepped before her, forgetting the slipper in this new menace. With a swift motion she captured it.

"I assure you," she began. But disregarding him with a movement of her heel and instead she dislodged her own pump, and, bending, slipped on the silver pump. Not all the way however. The wad of paper prevented her foot from sliding into place. Before she could struggle with it, he had taken it from her.

"You'll have to cut off a piece of your heel, Princess," he muttered brutally and vaulted through the low window, slipper in hand.

Just then along came Mrs. Martinson, her blonde loveliness set off by a clinging gown of jade. Marianna told her all about it. But when they circled the porch of the casino there was no sign of Alice.

"I'm really certain that was my sister. But how did she get here? And who brought her? She's only a schoolgirl. She ought to be home in bed. I'm worried to death. And I could swear that was my slipper."

"Dear," Mrs. Martinson soothed her, as a young man came up to ask for the dance, "you must have been mistaken. That couldn't have been your little sister. Don't spoil your evening worrying. She's safe at home in bed. If you phone you will probably wake them and frighten your aunt. In the morning we'll run out there, just to satisfy you. As for Peter—don't give him another thought. I admit he's simply unspeakable."

But the next morning there was no need for running out there. Because, before ever she was out of bed, a note was delivered to Marianna that had been brought over by one of the Carter offspring, who, at the same time, turned over to Mrs. Martinson's maid a bundle containing a pair of silver slippers, a dress and a cape belonging to sundry of the week-end guests and about whose disappearance said guests knew nothing—or little.

The note had been scrawled by Alice Browne in the living room of the Carter cottage, while Peter Duffy was engaged in persuading the Rev. Dr. Blanchard to get out of bed and dress and perform a certain little "Would you go to Buckingham palace in shirt sleeves and torn breeches?"

"I haven't another piece of clothing to my name. I lost the rest in the jungle."

"You can't see the president," said the black man, turning away.

"I tell you I'm jolly well going to," exclaimed the exasperated explorer. "Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm the president, and you can't see him."

"I'm the explorer who promised to give your government a map when he came back," Major Wallace replied.

Later he entered the French Congo and assisted in making the geological survey map of 100,000 square miles. During this mission he walked 4,000 miles, found unknown rivers and charted those known but unmapped.

Entering the Belgian Congo, he opened up large areas of Eleais palm and explored the southern bank of the Congo opposite Lisala, where the river is nine miles wide. He helped make the trace of the proposed railroad from Brazzaville to the Atlantic and sounded the Bay of Lakonde, the suggested port and picked out the island he is now turning into a coconut plantation.

White Fang

affected now by the houses and the huge fort all of massive logs. Here was power. Those white gods were strong. They possessed greater mastery over matter than the gods he had known, most powerful among which was Gray Beaver. And yet Gray Beaver was as a child-god among these white-skinned ones.

To be sure, White Fang only felt these things. He was not conscious of them. Yet it is upon feeling, more often than thinking, that animals act; and every act White Fang now performed was based upon the feeling that the white men were the superior gods. In the first place he was very suspicious of them. There was no telling what unknown hurts they could administer. He was curious to observe them, fearful of being noticed by them. For the first few hours he was content with slinking around and watching them from a safe distance. Then he saw that no harm befell the dogs that were near to them, and he came in closer.

In turn, he was an object of great curiosity to them. His wolfish appearance caught their eyes at once, and they pointed him out to one another. This act of pointing put White Fang on his guard, and when they tried to approach him he showed his teeth and backed away. Not one succeeded in laying a hand on him, and it was well that they did not.

White Fang soon learned that very few of these gods—not more than a dozen—lived at this place. Every two or three days a steamer (another and colossal manifestation of power) came in to the bank and stopped for several hours. The white men came from off these steamers and went away on them again. There seemed untold numbers of these white men. In the first day or so, he saw more of them than he had seen Indians in all his life; and as the days went by they continued to come up the river, stop, and then go on up the river and out of sight.

But if the white gods were all-powerful, their dogs did not amount to much. This White Fang quickly discovered by mixing with those that came ashore with their masters. They were of irregular shapes and sizes. Some were short-legged—too short; others were long-legged—too long. They had hair instead of fur, and a few had very little hair at that. And none of them knew how to fight.

As an enemy of his kind, it was in White Fang's province to fight with them. This he did, and he quickly achieved for them a mighty contempt. They were soft and helpless, made much noise, and floundered around clumsily, trying to accomplish by main strength what he accomplished by dexterity and cunning. They rushed bellowing at him. He sprang to the side. They did not know what had become of him; and in that moment he struck them on the shoulder, rolling them off their feet and delivering his stroke at the throat.

Sometimes this stroke was successful, and a stricken dog rolled in the dirt, to be pounced upon and torn to pieces by the pack of Indian dogs that waited. White Fang was wise. He had long since learned that the gods were made angry when their dogs were killed. The white men were no exception to this. So he was content, when he had overthrown and slashed wide the throat of one of their dogs, to drop back and let the pack go in and do the cruel finishing work. It was then that the white men rushed in, visiting their wrath heavily on the pack, while White Fang went free. He would stand off at a little distance and look on, while stones, clubs, axes, and all sorts of weapons fell upon his fellows. White Fang was very wise.

But his fellows grew wise, in their own way; and in this White Fang grew wise with them. They learned that it was when a steamer first tied to the bank that they had their fun. After the first two or three strange dogs had been downed and destroyed, the white men hustled their own animals back on board and wreaked savage vengeance on the offenders. One white man, having seen his dog, a setter, torn to pieces before his eyes, drew a revolver. He fired rapidly, six times, and six of the pack lay dead or dying—another manifestation of power that sank deep into White Fang's consciousness.

White Fang enjoyed it all. He did not love his kind, and he was shrewd enough to escape hurt himself. At first, the killing of the white men's dogs had been a diversion. After a time it became his occupation. There was no work for him to do. Gray Beaver was busy trading and getting wealthy. So White Fang hung around the landing with the disreputable gang of Indian dogs, waiting for steamers. With the arrival of a steamer the fun began. After a few minutes, by the time the white men had got over their surprise, the gang scattered. The fun was over until the next steamer should arrive.

But it can scarcely be said that White Fang was a member of the gang. He did not mingle with it; but remained aloof, always himself, and was even feared by it. It is true, he worked with it. He picked the quarrel with the strange dog while the gang waited. And when he had overthrown the strange dog the gang went in to finish it. But it is equally true that he then withdrew, leaving the gang to receive the punishment of the outraged gods.

It did not require much exertion to pick these quarrels. All he had to do, when the strange dogs came ashore, was to show himself. When they saw him they rushed for him. It was their instinct. He was the Wild—the unknown, the terrible, the ever menacing, the thing that prowled in the darkness around the fires of the primeval world when they, cowering close to the fires, were reshaping their instincts, learning to fear the Wild out of which they had come, and which they had deserted and betrayed. Generation by generation, down all the generations, had this fear of the Wild been stamped into their natures. For centuries the Wild had stood for terror and destruction. And during all this time free license had been theirs, from their masters, to kill the things of the Wild. In doing this they had protected both themselves and the gods whose companionship they shared.

And so fresh from the soft southern world, these dogs, trotting down the gang-plank and out upon the Yukon shore, had but to see White Fang to experience the irresistible impulse to rush upon him and destroy him. They might be town-reared dogs, but the instinctive fear of the Wild was theirs just the same. Not alone with their eyes did they see the wolfish creature in the clear light of day, standing before them. They saw him with the eyes of their ancestors, and by the inherited memory they knew White Fang for the wolf, and they remembered the ancient feud.

"It Sprang Like a Wolf At My Throat."

Other people in distress hope for sleep. I dread sleep, because always in my dreams a great dog arises, with fangs wide apart, and he makes for me.

"One worst dream of all came when I thought the dog was chasing me. I arose; it was midnight. One passion possessed me—to run away from the ugly beast. I started—I ran as fast as I could. When I awoke, my husband was shaking me into consciousness. I had run from our apartment in the hotel and through two corridors before he had been able to overtake me. So, as any one will see, the nervous shock is more distressing than my partly paralyzed right arm and the red scars on my breast."

Edward Thomas Moore, who is Mrs. Thome's attorney of record, and Stalle Vinton, his associate, explain that rather a nice point of the law is involved in the suit against the Morans.

"The law under which Mrs. Thome sues," says Major Moore, "comes from the days of old Egypt, when exotic persons kept tame lions and tigers about the house. The law considered the harboring of a wild animal to be insurance—or assurance—of its peaceful conduct by its owners. That is, the presence of an ordinarily wild beast in a household was a legal guarantee by the owners that the animal was harmless."

"Our own statute in regard to animals is similar. The harmlessness of a house cat or dog in a family is guaranteed by its presence there, since the law presumes and requires that it shall not be harbored if it is a menace."

BOUGHT regularly these would sell—some of them as high as $3.89. Later on in the fall like qualities will be so priced. A quantity purchase most opportunely made give us—and you—the advantage of a much lower price.

Heavy, handsome quality in either plain or satin-faced cantons—the plain in navy, copen, royal blue and black, the satin cantons in navy, rust, sandalwood, royal blue, sand, brown and black.

Certainly you'll supply your fall needs while such a price holds good!

Lovely Imported Laces at Half Price and Less!

AS a matter of fact, we have only begun to tell the story when we say "half price and less." The fact is, there are laces in this collection that ordinarily would range up to $3.50 per yard.

And they are surpassingly beautiful! Some are of dainty, web-like texture, light and airy and filmy—others are of the heavy, massive structure that is the very embodiment of stateliness.

A wide variety of kinds for your choosing—edges, bands and galoons in widths ranging from 2 to 9 inches. Included are bands of richest effect embroidered on net or linen.

Let us repeat that they're all imported—very specially bought and for that reason offered at these extremely low prices.

Ferst-Burgunder Nuptials Solemnized at Biltmore Hotel

The marriage of Miss Mazie R. Ferst and Herbert Burgunder, of Baltimore, was an event of social importance taking place Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Biltmore hotel.

The marriage ceremony took place in the handsome Georgian ballroom of the hotel, an altar being formed of tropical palms, ferns and cut flowers. Rabbi David Marx read the marriage service, which was witnessed by the members of the bride's family and a small group of out-of-town guests.

Entering first were the two small flower girls, Miss Babette Ferst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Ferst, and Miss Harriette Ferst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ferst, of Savannah. They were followed by a young accordion player dressed in a frayed jacket over flesh-colored satin slacks. They carried baskets of garden flowers in yellow and white.

Little Robert Ferst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monig Ferst, was the ringbearer and he entered just before the bride.

The lovely bride entered with her brother, Mazig Ferst, who gave her in marriage. She presented a charming appearance in her handsome bridal costume of filmy white chiffon, fashioned on simple, straight lines and trimmed in duchesse lace. The bottom of the skirt was decorated with a panel of chiffon panels which were outlined in a tracing of delicate embroidery. Her veil of tulle was edged with lovely point lace and confined to her hair with tiny sprays of orange blossoms. An arm bouquet of orchids and valerian completed the costume.

Bernie Burgunder, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony dinner was served, the guests being seated at a long table beautifully adorned in choice cut flowers, the shades ranging from pale yellow to deepest orange. The centerpiece was a mound formed of yellow and gold the candles, cakes and ices further carrying out the artistic color scheme.

At 9 o'clock a large and elaborate reception was held, the bride and groom receiving the guests with the members of the two immediate families.

Mrs. Aaron Ferst, mother of the bride, was handsomely gowned in black chiffon and lace over flesh satin. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of orchids.

Several hundred guests were entertained and the evening was spent in dancing in the ballroom.

During the evening Mr. Burgunder and his bride left for a five week's trip to Banff, Lake Louise and other points in the Canadian Rockies. On their return they will make their home in Baltimore.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. and Mrs. Lee Ferst, of Savannah, brother and sister of the bride. Miss Ruth Ferst, of Savannah, cousin of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Burgunder, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Oppenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Westheimer, of Baltimore, and Ferdinand Newberger, of Savannah.

Miss Mallard Weds Prof. P. L. Thorne.

Augusta, Ga., August 2.—No marriage of the summer season has been the occasion of more cordial sojourn than that of Miss Willie Kathryn Mallard and Professor Percy Leonides Thorne, of New York, which occurred in Oakland, Calif., July 5, the day the bride was taking a summer course at Berkeley university.

The young couple left after the ceremony for New York, where Professor Thorne is a member of the faculty of the University of New York, holding the position of acting dean of the college of arts and pure science in the university.

The marriage is the culmination of a romance that began a year or more ago when Professor Thorne came from New York to teach at the summer school of Miss Virginia Vidor, and Hammond Price, of New York, and Miss Mallard was maid of honor.

What's What in the Shops and about town

I have the best news for you—yesterday we lunched with Marion and she showed me a letter she had just received from the management of the Atlanta Biltmore, and the news it contained will delight the innermost soul of the Atlanta hostess. It seems that the Biltmore has had so many requests from their patrons for the wonderful French pastries created by their famous chef, Gene, that they are going to offer them to you for the small cost of $1.50 per dozen. Can you imagine anything more wonderful? And in addition to this they will pack the most wonderful picnic luncheons—everything complete for a perfect meal at prices just as reasonable.

Have you ever dreamed of a simplified menu, where delicious food appeared as if by magic with no effort or anxiety on your part? This is just what a Biltmore picnic luncheon can do for you. Delicious foods, skillfully packed, fresh and crisp, are prepared on short notice.

This gives the hostess an opportunity to give her friends a day in the sunshine when I say that I found them the smart thing in Paris. And, too, walking and dancing used to put my shoes out of shape, but I found these Stewart shoes the most comfortable and I feel as if I am gliding along absolutely unconscious of my feet!

"So you may buy from Stewart and be sure they are style-right and of the best quality and price. Yesterday I went down to buy some new ones for my trip next week. I bought several pairs—really there

Speaking of interior decorating—have you seen Mary's new home in Peachtree Heights? She gave a swimming party last week—last week was a truly busy week and we all looked forward to Mary's "spend-the-day" party with pleasure. And it was even more than we anticipated. In the rear of her house is a beautiful little garden, not as elaborate as many in town, but a beautiful and happy looking place centered about a beautiful swimming pool. We had a good old swim, and after we got out and were lounging around in dressing gowns the trim maid brought us the nicest 1. the sandwiches and COFFEE! I say coffee in capitals because truly this was the best coffee I ever had.

I would never have thought of serving coffee in the summer time—but after the swim you have no idea how good it was. It was "French coffee" as we know it—mostly rich cream—nor neither was it "Creole coffee" so thick and black, yet it had the richness of both. Mary explained that it was Three Mountain coffee.

"You see," she said, "I buy everything at Rogers' stores and believe it is the best coffee we have. I believe Rogers' is as I do. I tried it, and everybody in the family is delighted with it. I learned quite a lot about coffee this week because at dinner the other night someone else remarked about my excellent coffee. And you know yourself how it is—lights a hostess to tell anything is the 'most delicious I ever tasted,' so I began explaining what it was and where I got it.

"Among our guests was Dr. Blank. You know he lived in Central America for some time, and when I said I thought the name 'Three Mountain' rather a foolish one, he began to explain. It seems that the poor, cheap coffee is grown in the lowlands and that the very best grade is grown on the mountain sides. And the higher the altitude the better coffee, and he said that I could justly and proudly tell my guests that used 'cafe des montes' and they would know it was the very best."

Yesterday I went on my weekly shopping trip to Rogers', and the first thing I inquired for was Three Mountain coffee. Here the manager explained even rather to me that this coffee was grown specially selected, roasted, ground and packed in Costa Rica, Central America, which is famous for its producing a wonderful high altitude coffee. This coffee is shipped to Rogers' direct from the plantations of Central America. It is steel cut and vacuum packed. Now that Mary has set the fashion in our set I have tried it and I want to recommend it to you. And soon I suppose everybody will be using it.

Rogers' has become to Atlanta housewives what Harpers' Bazaar has become to the well-dressed woman—the last word in style and quality. For Rogers', in their sincere desire to help their patrons, are always offering the newest things in season and at such prices that we all can afford regardless of our circumstances. This service and quality added to the convenience of their stores "around most every corner" has made Rogers Atlanta's most popular grocer.

Rogers' is giving an added service to their customers during the summer months by having deliveries to their stores each day of fresh produce, butter, eggs, milk. It is not necessary to stock up your pantry and refrigerator with foodstuffs, for you can get fresh supplies each day now and for the balance the hot weather months.

There is no guesswork about buying your draperies from this company. They will send an expert out to your home and measure windows and work out a distinctive design that will give just the individual flair needed in your new home and make them for a very "all cost above the price of the material."

Is that the style for fall? They are the smartest things I have seen!" A chorus of such exclamations and then Nan laughed and said: "Oh, my dears, these are the smartest things in new footwear, and although I purchased them in Atlanta yesterday from your most exclusive shoe shop, they are also the newest in Paris. In fact, I would almost swear to that from now on."

"When I went abroad at the suggestion of a friend, I bought shoes for my whole trip at Stewart's Shoe Company, on Whitehall, and you are arriving every day, and when they all arrive next week you will have to agree that Davison-Paxon-Stokes has the best assortment in the south! The most interesting of all in this department is what I shall call the service department; however, I suppose interior decorating establishments have another name for it. Mr. Chapman, a noted decorator, is in charge. He will be glad to give you the benefit of his study and experience by suggesting color schemes and show you me original ideas that will add good taste and adorn the unusual interiors.

There is a decided rage in Paris just now for beige. It rivals the mode of the black and white.

New Zealanders Speak in Macon

BY MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD MACON.

Mrs. Rachel Don, of Ravensborne, Dunedin, New Zealand, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the Dominion of New Zealand, a speaker of surpassing ability, will fill the pulpit at the Vineville Baptist church at the 11 o'clock hour this morning and at Mulberry Street Methodist church this evening.

She has delighted audiences in California, Colorado, Iowa, Illinois and Atlanta, Eastman, McRae, Newnan and Barnesville in our state since coming to America in June.

Mrs. Don, who is a Methodist minister, preached at the Eastman Methodist church last Sunday. Dr. Mary Harris Armor wrote of the service: "We had a great union service yesterday morning, and Mrs. Don gave a message of tremendous power. I have never seen an Eastern audience in all the years I have lived here so deeply and universally moved and thrilled. People pressed forward to speak to her at the close with tear-dimmed eyes, many of them so overcome by emotion that they could not speak. No person has ever visited this town who has so captivated the people as Mrs. Don. The longer she stays the more we love her."

Mrs. Armor also had cordial words of praise for Miss Henderson, who will speak at the Vineville Presbyterian Sunday school this morning. Miss Henderson is a member of the Presbyterian church in her country.

Banquet Monday Evening.

The Macon W. C. T. U. will entertain Mrs. Don and Miss Henderson with a banquet Monday evening at 6 o'clock in the dining hall of Mulberry Street Methodist church, which 75 prominent citizens have signed their intention of attending.

Dr. Walter Anthony will be the toastmaster, and will welcome our New Zealand guests. The program will begin with a prayer by R. W. Weaver, president of Mercer university, and close with a service by Rev. H. C. Freeman, pastor of Cherokee Heights Methodist church.

Brief talks will be made by Mrs. D. A. Warlick, president of the Macon and Sixth District; W. C. T. U. on "The W. C. T. U. Golden Jubilee."

R. L. Anderson, president of Exchange Club; "The Temperance Reformation Before and Since Prohibition"; R. L. # THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVI, No. 53.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 3, 1924.

Magill-Phipps Engagement Is Announced Today

Of cordial interest to many friends is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Carolyn Margaret Magill and Charles Albert Phipps, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Miss Magill is the only daughter of Mrs. James William Magill and the late James William Magill. Her mother before her marriage was Miss Sara Louise Carter, daughter of the late Dr. Josiah Anthony Carter and Mrs. Louise Northern Carter. On her maternal side the bride-elect is descended from the Carters of Virginia and the Northrons of Virginia and Georgia.

Miss Magill is a member of the college set, having been chosen sponsor for the Georgia Tech R. O. T. C. and also sponsor for several of the college publications—for the past years.

Mr. Phipps' mother is now Mrs. R. F. Schroeter of St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly Miss Celia Crill, of a distinguished Tennessee family. On Mr. Phipps' paternal side he is descended from the Phipps family, prominent residents of New Castle, Pa. Mr. Phipps attended the University of Michigan and later Georgia Tech, from which school he was graduated in 1924. He is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, was president of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, during his senior year, and was a popular member of the Glee club and Marionettes.

Midsummer visitors at the Manor include Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Holt, Mrs. E. W. Newman, Miss Linda Newman and Arthur W. Smith, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Joseph H. Calvin, of Decatur, Ga., was among the guests attending a porch luncheon at the home of Mrs. V. L. Stone in Asheville early in the week.

Mrs. Preston Robertson, of Atlanta, is the house guest of Mrs. M. C. Jackson, in Asheville.

Mr. and Mrs. Judkins To Honor Mrs. Sykes.

A delightful dinner party of this evening will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Holland Judkins at their home at the Biltmore in compliment to Mrs. Lida Williams Sykes, of Mississippi, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. John K. Judkins.

Cakes will be placed for Mr. and Mrs. Ottley, Mrs. Sykes, Mr. and Mrs. George McCarty, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Troutman and Mr. and Mrs. Judkins.

Group of Visitors Honored at Party.

A delightful bridge-tea of Saturday afternoon was given by Miss Sophie Horne at her home on West Peachtree street in compliment to her guest, Miss Mary Beckmann; Mrs. Edmond Eastman and Misses Giles, Blum, and Alice, guests of Miss Louise Linthicum, and Miss Nancy Linthicum, and Miss Mildred Bening, of Whitman, the guest of Miss Elizabeth Myers.

Lovely midsummer garden flowers were used in the decorations in the room where the game was played. Miss Horne wore a dainty blue robe dress trimmed in cream lace.

The guests included Mrs. Eastman, Miss Giles, Miss Lauri Linthicum, Miss Nancy Linthicum, Miss Bening, Miss Blum, Miss Beckmann, Miss Mildred Bening, Misses Cooper, Miss Evelyn Donohue, Miss Dorothy Dorough, Miss Zudie Dorough, Miss Evelyn Dunson, Miss Arameta Edwards, Miss Julia Garner, Miss Annette Gay, Miss Minnie Lasseter, Miss Julie Memminger, Miss Beulie Mitchell, Miss Frances Wells, Miss Beatrice North, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Evelyn

Lovely Bride and Beautiful Brides-Elect

Night Swimming
To Start Monday
At Brookhaven

The first week in August finds the summer season at its height, for the stay-at-homes, together with their visitors, are finding varied amusements in social life revolving around the country clubs. Now that night swimming and tennis playing will begin at Brookhaven Capital City Country club on Monday, and will be featured thereafter on Wednesday and Friday evenings, there will be an added interest to summer life in Atlanta.

Searchlights will play over the lake and lifeguards will be on duty until 10 o'clock, the closing hour. Lights have also been installed over the tennis courts, to be operated thrice weekly.

In these modern days, when every club boasts of a tennis court, pool on lake, society goes in for tennis games and swims, always to be followed by refreshments, for one's appetite is certain to be whetted by a game and swim before breakfast or dinner.

The list of visitors who are being entertained at the social galettes include Mr. and Mrs. Ulric S. Atkinson, of Chicago; Mrs. Henry M. Tanner, of Fort Meyers, Fla.; Mrs. Lida Williams Sykes, of Mississippi; Miss Adelaide Douglas, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Miss Josephine Connors, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. May Gordon Caudle, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Miss Mary Baker McGhee, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Betty Pou, of Columbus; Mrs. James Andrew Dow, of Galveston, Texas; Mrs. Jane Taylor Haynes, of Trenton, Tenn.; Mrs. Holland Lowndes, of San Antonio, Texas; Miss Mary Clements, of Buena Vista, Ga.; Mrs. Edmund Eastman and Miss Ellen Giles, of Birmingham, Ala.; Miss Mildred Bening, of Whitman; Mrs. Ira Jones, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Charlotte Milstead, of Charlotte, N. C.; Miss Lucile Almand, of Conyers; Mrs. Mamie Folsom Wynne, of Dallas, Texas; Mrs. Roscoe Hearn, of Panama; Mrs. Edwart T. Donnelly, who has been living in Italy for several years, and Mrs. Julia F. Mann, of Larchmont, N. Y.

Al Fresco Affairs At Biltmore Hotel.

Al fresco affairs at the Biltmore hotel will continue to delight those members of Atlanta society who remain at home while others are disporting themselves at the fashionable beaches or mountain resorts.

The first affair of this week will be the de luxe concert-dinner on the garden terrace, adjacent to the east portion of the hotel. This event will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

Present reservations indicate that a vast throng of society people will congregate in the Biltmore garden for the attractive occasion.

Enrico Leslie, official musical director for the hotel, will personally direct the augmented concert orchestra.

Other public affairs at the Biltmore, to be given on the terrace if weather permits, will be the 5 o'clock tea-dances on Wednesday and Saturday afternoon. These delightful occasions continue to draw great throngs.

Miss Ida Sadler Honors House Party.

Miss Ida Sadler was hostess at the Biltmore tea-dance on Saturday afternoon in compliment to Miss Nancy Carr and Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Turner, Jr., and the guests who are members of the delightful house-party being entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, on Wesley avenue.

Dinner-Dance At Piedmont Club.

A hundred and fifty members of Atlanta society gathered at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening for the week-end dinner-dance on the cool, beautifully lighted terrace. A group of club members and their friends enjoyed a swim in the pool their guests for dinner Mr. and Mrs.

Dinner was served on the terrace from small tables made gay with baskets of brightly-tinted summer flowers. The tall green shrubs and blooming flower-boxes edging the terrace made a lovely background for the airy summer toilettes of the beautifully gowned women present.

Mr. and Mrs. Cary Baker entertained as their guests Mr. and Mrs. C. C. McGehee were host. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newell, Dr. and Mrs. Dunbar Roy, Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Sims Bray, Dr. and Mrs. Bates Block.

Mrs. Roscoe Hearn, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. Park Woodward, was among the charming visitors attending the dinner-dance.

Others entertaining parties were Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr.

Miss Parker To Wed Dr. Malcolm Turner, Jr.

Much interest centers in the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Margaret Emerson Parker, daughter of Mrs. Robert E. Parker and the late Mr. Parker, to Dr. Malcolm Turner, Jr., the wedding to take place in the fall at the church of the late Dr. Parker on Wednesday, September 3.

Miss Parker is a graduate of the Girls' High school and attended Agnes Scott college. Miss Parker's mother was, before her marriage, Miss Kate Shumate, daughter of Col. I. E. Shumate, who was a prominent lawyer of Dahlonega, Ga.

Dr. Malcolm E. Turner, Jr., is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm E. Turner, Sr. He attended Sewanee, where he was in Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He graduated from Atlanta Dental college this past June and is a member of Phi Omega fraternity.

Mrs. Mann Is Feted Guest of Mrs. Becker.

Mrs. Julia F. Mann, of Larchmont, N. Y., arrived Saturday and is the attractive guest of Mrs. C. H. Becker on her home on West Fourteenth street.

Mrs. Mann will be entertained at a series of delightful social affairs during her visit. Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Blalock will be hosts at a party in her honor Thursday evening, when they will entertain at the dinner-dance on the roof garden of the Capital City club.

Mr. and Mrs. Becker invited a group of friends to meet their guest at the week-end dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening. Covers were laid for Mrs. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Blalock, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Caudle, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Jr., Homer Hens and Mr. and Mrs. Becker.

A number of parties, teas, luncheons and dances will be given this week with Mrs. Mann as central figure, the dates to be announced later.

New Land Grant Is Given To Tallulah Falls School

Five acres of land just above the new school site is a recent gift to Georgia Federation's mountain school at Tallulah Falls.

The donors are Mrs. Mary Mildred Sullivan, of New York, and her son, George H. Sullivan, of Sullivan & Cromwell, and the gift is made in memory of Mrs. Sullivan's sister, the late Harriet Milton Hammond.

Her name will永远 be remembered in the choir invisible of high-minded men and women whose memories cling about the work at Tallulah Falls like good deeds which "smell sweet and blossom in the dust."

An able and successful teacher is New York city for many years, Miss Hammond held the tract in the mountains of north Georgia as a little haven to which she planned to return some day. She had no mind to build a home on the wooded hillside which overlooks the world and spend her last years in friendly service for the mountain people in whom she had long been interested.

Her unusual gifts of mind and heart would have made her a real teacher for good in this community. It is fitting that some part of this

The Clubwoman--Here, There and Everywhere

BY LESLIE STRINGFELLOW

(Director, General Federation of Women's Clubs.)

"It is possible for the women of America to make the nineteenth amendment enforce the election of Mrs. Philip North Moore, St. Louis, president of the National Council of Women and past president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, in telling women everywhere she speaks. Mrs. Moore's latest successful address is "What Ten Million Women Think of Prohibition, and she is using it effectively in the campaign for law-enforcement. The nation, as well as the International Council of Women in Washington in 1925 will launch a campaign "to make the world short cuts for women.

Short cuts in a woman's task of clothing and feeding the family are as important as teaching the farmer to plant and to keep a well-tilled, sanitary herd. Dr. B. H. Crocheron, head of the University of California, is telling women's clubs, complimenting them in their fight for federal legislation for various causes, and especially their continued support of the activities of home demonstration agents in 800 counties of the United States, which in many instances was supported by clubwomen until quorum courts could be induced to meet the government appropriations. People in the 6,000,000 farm homes of America are not given the following will-o'-the-wisps, said Dr. Crocheron in telling of their enthusiastic welcome of the home demonstration work which is for the first time given short cuts in work to overburdened women of the farm.

A New Kind of Musical Program?

Here's One.

Illinois leads the way in a good many club activities. But it remains for Keithsburg to study up a brand new idea for club musicals.

First of all the event is announced as a musical drama competition to be held. Resolved that the songs of Today, ten to twelve, for instance, the songs of Today in sweetness and harmony.

Then, to a softly played minuet a woman enters. She is dressed in quaint gown in the fashion of long ago, and announces her name to be "Beloved Old Songs." She has come to sing the songs of the past, of the most interesting of the past.

Chairmen of committees include Mrs. T. M. Purcell, literature; Mr. K. S. Youmans, music; Mrs. W. P. Wright, civics; Mrs. L. B. Franklin, social; Mrs. B. B. Trapnell, membership and attendance; Mrs. Paul Dabbs, and Mrs. J. W. Yandell, Daughters; and Mrs. Sid Kinney, program; Mrs. H. R. Yandell, charity.

The following reports from various chairmen of the Metter Women's Club proclaim her own songs the best, she endeavors to prove her point by singing a song representative of her point, choosing from the songs of all time, those that best bring out the spirit of the respective pieces.

The matter is referred to the judges, while each debater decides the other's songs are the best. As conclusion the two sing in duet a special arrangement. "There Are No Songs Like the Old Songs, Unless It Might Be the Songs of Today."

The dialogue of debate is written in poetry and those who have heard it declare it clever and entertaining. The Keithsburg club gave the entertainment in a private home, using a large doorway as an open stage, while as setting. Soft shaded lights added to the effectiveness.

Mrs. W. R. Grant is author of the skit. She says:

"I will be glad to help some other clubwoman solve her program problem. Much depends upon costumes and lighting, on the voices and appearance of the girls, and upon the skill of the pianist. Any songs of the two periods may be used, but music chairman can best look after this section. Between six and eight songs are used by each person and the entire debate is over in 30 minutes. We will have the same program for a church entertainment soon, and it should be used by any club or society."

The East Indian Woman Emerges.

Writes Dorothy Jinarajadas, prominent clubwoman of East India: "In India too, we shall go forth and spread the gospel of womanhood and demand freedom. Great opportunity daily is presented to the Indian woman and she is now awake to realize that she had a great part to play in building India as a nation, and that she will have a greater part in its future. She has been added to these daily self-sacrifice added to these now is her realization that spirituality means action and service. Her capacity is great and she goes straight forward, overcoming all obstacles to reach her goal. Today the need of education of girls is being realized. The ever before and the age of girls for marriage is being raised. The Woman's Indian association is doing much for the girls, eager to learn, to attend classes and lectures, to form organizations and clubs for this purpose. It is an effort to be made to prevent a woman from taking up any profession that she may wish, and many women are studying to be doctors, lawyers and politicians. There are a number of women on local boards and councils, especially in Madras presidency. In Bombay, for instance, were elected councillors at the last municipal elec-

Tallulah Falls School Birthday Is Extended

By request of many clubs throughout the state the season of birthday celebration for Tallulah Falls school will be extended through August and even further if desirable.

The suggestion of a "birthday party for Tallulah" did not reach the clubs until July was half over and since many have not been able to get their celebration into July, the actual birth-month, we shall begin to celebrate on July 1 next year, and as the school will be "sweet sixteen" and will be spick and span with its new buildings and everything repaired, we can very well consider these as "coming out" parties with 16 pink candles and all the attention befitting a debutante.

This is such a notable year of rejoicing for the school that the season may very well be extended.

This, the fifteenth year, sees the buildings begun which will double the school plant, and this season closes the two-year period of the Greater Tallulah camp.

Every day this summer will be a birthday for the Greater Tallulah—as every day shows progress on the building program.

So celebrate, celebrate, celebrate the whole summer through, letting every celebration bring in a gift to help these buildings grow. Write and tell us about your celebration.

Secretary Tallulah Falls School Trustees.

Franklin County Federation Meets In All-Day Session

Athens, Ga., August 2.—The Franklin County Federation of Women's Clubs met in an all-day session at Canton on Friday, July 18, with an unusually good attendance, clubwomen from a number of towns nearby being there to enjoy the well thought out and delightfully presented program.

Mrs. D. T. Barnes, president Franklin County Federation, opened and introduced Colonel Claud Bond, of Toccoa, as the first speaker. His remarks on "Immigration" were very well received with appreciation.

A parliamentary drill conducted by W. L. Hodges of Hartwell, was interesting and instructive, each one present feeling the need more and more for additional knowledge of the proper procedure in meetings and of correct views to take on all subjects presented.

A violin solo by Miss Imogene McCrary of Royston, gave pleasure, this feature followed by a talk on "The Influence of Women's Clubs" by Mrs. A. L. Supple of Covington. She gave inspiration and encouragement and further urged the members to increased efforts to make of their clubs outstanding institutions in their respective communities—for the mind women's clubs exert a wide influence on good everywhere.

At the June meeting of the club, Mrs. H. Morton was elected president, and Mrs. F. L. Brinson, vice-president. They will go into office in September. Mrs. Dade Durden is the retiring president.

The civics committee of the Metter Club is keeping the parks and surroundings grounds beautiful.

Mrs. A. J. Mooney, president of the Statesboro Woman's club, writes that the education committee gave a water-melon cutting in honor of summer students of First District A. & M. school.

The public welfare committee will give a picnic the first week in August for the benefit of the red room.

They have also planned to clean up the park and place seats in it.

The ways and means committee is planning to give a play the latter part of August, using the college students before they return to college, and will also give a Tallulah birthday party.

The officers of the Metter Woman's Club at their last regular monthly meeting appointed members for the various committees and their chairmen who will serve during the year 1924-25.

Membership, attendance, social, literary, program, charity and thrift.

Chairmen of committees include Mrs. T. M. Purcell, literature; Mr. K. S. Youmans, music; Mrs. W. P. Wright, civics; Mrs. L. B. Franklin, social; Mrs. B. B. Trapnell, membership and attendance; Mrs. Paul Dabbs, and Mrs. J. W. Yandell, Daughters; and Mrs. Sid Kinney, program; Mrs. H. R. Yandell, charity.

Portable scales have been bought for the school, five standard balances with twenty volumes of books have been given to the library, pencils and tablets distributed to last children and has been paid, chinning poles and swings erected on the school grounds.

Our club also entertained the first district convention in April. Yearly we give $20 to Tallulah Falls.

The finance committee reported $2,000 made this year. The civic committee has been very active during the entire year. We have conducted clean-up week, numbers of trees and shrubs have been planted in the parks and in the parks, garbage cans have been placed in front of every store in town.

The music committee met each month at home of the members. Music in its different forms was studied. The committee donated $50 to the school. The citizenship committee also completed a course of study during the year.

Mrs. Inman Writes Of Honolulu Trip.

Mrs. Sam M. Inman writes from Samoa:

"The Los Angeles meeting of general federation was a great success in every way."

"This after-trip is just what I needed as I am resting and enjoying every minute of the change. Our cruise has been perfect, the sea calm, the water unbelievably blue and the air fresh and cool."

"Our short stop at Honolulu was most interesting. I was glad to meet those good friends at the Tallulah Falls school, Mr. and Mrs. K. L. Kellum, who are en route for the South Sea Islands."

"Before very long I shall be turning home again greatly refreshed by my stay."

Headquarters To Be At Biltmore Hotel.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, announces that the Biltmore hotel has been selected as the headquarters for the annual meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Atlanta November 11 to 14 inclusive, this date having been set by Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the state organization.

One of the most interesting and beneficial social activities of the past week was the linen shower given for the Tallulah Falls' school by the Lexington Woman's Club.

Lovely baskets of gold and white zinnias were placed on tables and piano in the spacious living room; jardinières of pink lilies were used in the reception hall.

The program committee entertained the guests of honor by a number of lighted programs: Music, Miss Adelaide McWhorter; reading, Miss Esther Baron; violin and piano solos, Misses Emily Cloud and Mary Alexander; vocal solo, Miss Mary Alexander.

Mrs. T. W. Crawford read an interesting and detailed account of the history of the Tallulah Falls school, at the close of which a real little mountain girl (Miss Emily Cloud) came in and invited the guests into the dining room to see her wonderful birthday cake, which was a glow with fifteen tiny candles. Miss Tallulah extended a invitation for the splendid luncheon to be held the annual shower of the Lexington club and insisted on raising the top of the lovely pink and white cake, which held countless numbers of household linens.

The guests enjoyed a very lively and animated program.

The ways and means committee served most delightful tea and sandwiches.

Mrs. Heinsohn Writes

Of Plans and Work

In the Second District

Mrs. Robert Heinsohn, of Sylvester, president of the second district federation of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, writes: "All the clubs of the district disbanded during June, July and August, and many remain so through September."

There are no club houses in the district to be kept open during the summer as social centers and the many club rooms in use during the winter months are mostly deserted through the hot weeks.

"Of course those of our clubs who have club houses never close them, and the Sylvester Woman's Club is one of these. We serve the Kiwanis luncheons every Friday, which is indeed a small undertaking during hot days."

"We have been able to add quite a little sum to our building fund by this means, and also have recently received a gift of $100 from the Kiwanis' offer of real substantial help when we begin our building."

"The civic committee of the Metter Club is keeping the parks and surroundings grounds beautiful."

LEATRICE JOY IN DUAL ROLE AT THE RIALTO

Great Actress Stars Here In "Changing Husbands."

Admirers of Leatrice Joy are promised a treat when "Changing Husbands" is flashed on the local screen at the Rialto theater Monday. They will see her in a part that calls for every ounce of histrionic power that is in her. The acid test of a great actor or actress is the ability to portray a dual role with convincing skill, and that is exactly what the lovely Leatrice is called upon to do in this production.

"Any Old Rags," a Standard comedy, the International News reel which changes on Thursday, and incidental music by Whitney Huber's orchestra will complete the program.

The story deals with a man, embittered by the society life, the death of his wife, who sails with oil-drillers on his yacht to the Georgia coast, and there meets a strange trio—two men, one of them mad, and a beautiful girl. The experiences of the five during the brief stay in the lagoon make up one of the most gripping stories ever told.

Frank Mayo plays admirably the role of John Woolfolk, the man who seeks Virginia Valli as the beautiful girl who has lived her life in the Georgia swamps, seclusion from the world for his years. Nigel De Brulier as the good grandfather who comes with his granddaughter to the swamps, falls in love with a girl who bears a remarkable resemblance to her and who, at the time, is acting in a New York stage play. They both overlook purposes, to be sure, the important detail of notifying their agent affected by the wife, her husband, and the actress her fiance.

The result? Complications galore, which the audience is bound to enjoy.

Mystery, suspense, heart interest, action—they're all in this film woven into the golden story that master director King Vidor. Critics and public held "Three Wise Fools" one of the best pictures ever made. "Wild Oranges" eclipses "Three Wise Fools" in every way—and that's saying a whole lot. You ought to see the way sweet little Virginia Valli, as the primitive girl of the swamps, has won the heart of the heart of the seafarer, Frank Mayo, who has sworn off women forever.

And in addition to the strong love interest, there is a fist fight between Frank Mayo and the brute that's about a reel long, that's the most hair-raising battle ever filmed.

And then comes the big fire that escape to the yacht and the release of the great Dane watch dog, and the brave fight to direct the yacht through a howling storm across a treacherous sand-bar!

The photography is exceptional. Most of the scenes were taken in Georgia. A crew of twenty-five men are engaged in the actual rafting in addition to some sixty-five men employed along the river. About 20,000,000 feet of the company's lumber has already been rafted this season and

'WILD ORANGES' IS PHOToplay AT LOEW'S

Frank Mayo and Virginia Valli in Weird Story of Georgia Swamps.

A story abounding in thrills and suspense, and carrying through it a study of fear and its control of the human mind, has been made into a photoplay in "Wild Oranges," which King Vidor filmed for the Goldwyn studios and which will be seen at Loew's Grand all this week.

"Wild Oranges" is one of the most popular works from the pen of America's most celebrated novelist, Joseph Hergesheimer. It was written and published several years ago, before the author had become so internationally recognized.

The story deals with a man, embittered by the society life, the death of his wife, who sails with oil-drillers on his yacht to the Georgia coast, and there meets a strange trio—two men, one of them mad, and a beautiful girl. ## CLAIRE WINDSOR STARS IN SOCIETY DRAMA

"For Sale," at Metropolitan This Week, Is Story of Four Hundred.

The return of the society drama is easily evidenced by the First National production, "For Sale," a lavish photodrama of life in the upper strata.

Aside from the magnificent sets, "For Sale" has an all-star cast of exceptional caliber. The story deals with Eleanor Bates, daughter of the New York Four Hundred, whose father has embezzled a large sum of money from Joseph Hudley, a nouveau riche, and because of his obligation to his wife, has consented to accept the attentions and consequences of come engaged to Hudley. The story is laid in New York and Paris, contrasting the scenes of social splendor in the former city with scenes in the Montmartre district of Paris.

Claire Windsor, who plays the role of Eleanor, is said to have the greatest of all the brilliant careers. Eleanor runs full gamut of emotions and gives the stately Claire ample opportunity to wear some stunning gowns especially designed for her.

Adolphe Menjou as Joseph Hudley, a climber, whose wealth does not serve him in winning the love of the girl he has chosen, is part that best reflects that splendid actor's debonair and suave personality. His role is not the hackneyed villain, Robert Ellis as Allan Penfield, in love with and loved by Eleanor, is destined to another splendid characterization to his long list of successes. Miss Talmadge, the celebrated "Sheik," in "The Arab," has a part that is heretofore played. She is no longer seen in rags and the atmosphere of poverty. Tully Marshall, already accepted as the screen's greatest accepted actor, will be seen as the late Victor Herbert, forms the musical background in the score of this picture. It was the hit of the comic opera of the same name when presented in New York shortly before Mr. Herbert's death. Mr. Herbert's selections for the balance of the program are as follows: Morning Noon and Night as the overture, "I want to be happy" from No No Nanette's latest Chicago sensation, and excerpts from Poppy for the Comedy Presentation.

The comedy presentation this week will be Will Rogers in "Don't Park Here."

Montreal, Quebec.—Although the present season of ocean travel has reached the period usually associated with a falling off in the number of passengers steamship companies note that little decrease is apparent this year, and that the total volume of passenger traffic in 1924 will probably be the largest of any year since the war.

INGRAM'S 'THE ARAB' IS SHOWN AT HOWARD

Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry Are Co-Stars in Real "Sheik" Picture.

"The Arab," the new Rex Ingram production which will play at the Howard all this week, is one of the greatest of Ingram pictures, worthy in every way of the man who produced "The Four Horsemen" and "Scaramouche," and superbly acted by a cast that includes Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry. The picture was filmed in Algiers and Tunis, and it affords the most convincing of all arguments why pictures should be screened on the exact locale of the story, instead of at Hollywood studios. For Mr. Ingram is going to do what he has brought back with him to the screen all of the glorious enchantment that has beckoned to travelers through all the ages.

"The Arab" gives you the Orient in all of its wonderful color and exotic life, an authentic background for a drama, inside the picture, of suspense and excitement. Ramon Novarro appears in the title role, as an Arab guide who falls in love with an American missionary's daughter, played by Alice Terry. He learns of the Turkish plan to massacre the Christians, and after the Moslems from the mission are being led into the desert to certain death. He goes to their rescue, but when he gets them back to the mission, the fanatic Moslems, roused to fury by their leaders, break loose and attack the little Christian stronghold. Only a little girl can save them. But you must see the denouement for yourself. "The Arab" is a picture that nobody should miss.

Miss Terry looks lovelier than ever as the heroine. The blonde with her hair in a bun, her figure in a picture has been discarded and she appears in her natural dark-tinted bobbed hair. She rises to moments of enormous emotional appeal in the scene of the massacre, and she was never more alluring than in her love scene with Mr. Novarro.

This week the Howard theater will present the Howard symphony orchestra in an overture compiled from the symphonic suite, "Scheherazade," by Rimsky-Korsakoff. This music, among the most colorful of this great writer's compositions, is based on an old Arabic legend in which the Sultan Scharahzade, convinced of the infidelity of all women, had sworn to put to death each of his wives. The suite is based on four episodes, "Tales or Arabian Nights," "The Sea and the Vessel of Sinbad," "The Young Prince" and "The Dervishes." The program will be followed by a short film, "The Bagdad," Mr. Keesee, associate director at the Howard, will conduct.

The love motif for the feature production as scored by Conductor Risner is "Pale Hands I Love" from "Four Indian Love Lyrics" with the accompaniment of this being "The Arab," a similar fox trot written especially for this production. Other well-known classics included in the setting are "Caucasian Sketches," "A Lover in Damascus" and Hadley's "Ballet of the Fleas."

The prologue is "The Court of a Desert Queen" featuring Madeline Hauff, coloratura soprano late of the Savien Opera company, singing "The Arab," supported by Leonard White, Franziska Mueller and a company of Arabian dancers.

The comedy is Larry Semon in "The Midnight Cabaret," a screamingly funny comedy. Popular fox trots introduced in "Syrup-Jazz" during the comedy are "Spain," "The One I Love," and "Jimminy Gee."

A Song of Love.

(At Alamo No. 2)

Norma Talmadge, as a cherry-cheeked Ouled Nail dancer, has quite the most bewitching role of her career.

For weeks she has practiced the dances of the northern Sahara under skilled Arabian instruction. She will sing "Song of Love" at the Alamo No. 2 for three days, beginning on Monday.

Joseph Schildkraut, idol of semi-head theater-goers of two continents, head the supporting cast, which also includes Arthur Carewe, the "Sven-gali" of "Trilby," Mandie Wayne, Hilda V. Sturtevant, Lawrence Tibbett, Mario Carillo, James Cagney, Albert Prisco and Earl Schenck.

The attraction for Thursday and Friday is Harold Lloyd in his second feature-length comedy entitled, "Why Worry," while on Saturday a first-run film featuring Jack Perrin and Peggy O'Day will be shown.

Paramount Theater.

(For Colored Only.)

It will be shown that as a result of a nation-wide idea competition conducted by Cecil B. De Mille, thirty thousand answers were received. The winning idea, "The Ten Commandments," was made into a sensational success motion picture.

An outstanding c. o. was, "Give us more ice," in all parts of the country. Said the husbands, "We want to see men on the screen like those we know." Said the wives, "We want to see movies but it's hard to get our hubbies to stir out in the evenings. They say they don't like just love scenes. Give them something of their own stuff, and our job will be easy!"

Hence the new De Mille picture "Triumph," which carries one from modern factories to gilded cafes, from overalls to Paris gowns and from polo to a park bench in Madison Square, New York, a picture for men as well as women.

Ice from century-old glaciers is used as an Alaskan cannery to keep fish fresh while being shipped to the markets.

"Captain Kidd, Jr." IS COMEDY AT LYRIC

Fight for Buried Treasure Is Theme of Dramatic Farce Laughing Hit.

"Sixteen men on the dead man's chest, yo heave ho and a bottle of rum!"

That sets the pitch for next week's play at the Lyric theater. It is a blood-curdling, side-splitting, heart-warming, dramatic farce comedy, "Captain Kidd, Jr." and was written by none other than the ever-popular Rida Johnson Young.

A pirate's map, yellowed with age, pointing the way to millions of buried loot, is found.

A querulous old Scotchman, his fiery and wilful granddaughter, the young man who loves her to distraction, a rich young top who is mortally afraid of disgrace, a bony-nosed old woman who wants to know if the buried treasure problem. Several talented Atlantans have drawn good character roles, including Finley Freeborn, as the innocent cause of enveloping the whole bunch in the battle for the secret loot.

Atlantans may see "Captain Kidd, Jr." at any one of nine performances from Tuesday to Saturday night with ladies' bargain performances, and continuing each night during the week and at bargain matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

"Captain Kidd, Jr." was a knock-out both in New York and Chicago and drew record attendance in other cities of the country. The original company took it on tour.

It is said to be one of the best plays available for stock company use at the present time.

make the play possible probably could not develop in real life; but if they could develop in such a way, Miss Young has drawn her characters so true to life that the events could not be different from those in the play. The very implausibility of the story, however, only makes it the more thoroughly enjoyable.

Miss Edith King is the entrancing "Captain Kidd, Jr." She leads the chief role of hunters for the pirate gold. In her crew are Gus Forbes, as the good old grandpa; Wilfred Lytell, as the happy-go-lucky scamp of a lover who simply cannot make her admit she loves him; and Finley Freeborn, as the bright young owner of the secret chart and buried treasure, a spectacled, timid young millionaire who is good for a laugh in every line.

Opposed to them is a band led by William Macaulay, in a villain role that is more sinister than his Wilson in "Officer 666," aided and abetted by a number of the company.

Gavin Harris, last seen in "Thank You, Deacon Jones," gets a dandy role as the find-a-cause-of-the-buried-treasure problem.

Several talented Atlantans have drawn good character roles, including Finley Freeborn, as the innocent cause of enveloping the whole bunch in the battle for the secret loot.

The play gets off with a bang. The footlights are raised up from the stage and dash along for the fastest, most exciting, most laughable two hours offered at the Lyric, possibly since "Captain Applejack."

Heads, hearts and bank rolls are broken in the ever-engrossing quest of pirate gold.

The wrap-up of the play is surprising and most satisfying, but few can guess just how it is going to wind up until it does.

'Fatty' Arbuckle Stages Comeback At Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., August 2.—With the city council's official o. k. stamped upon his attempt to "earn an honest dollar" via the stage, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, former rotund comedian of the films, was wildly cheered as he toddled his 250-odd pounds of avoidable poise out in a local vaudeville house.

Arbuckle, who has an 18-minute "single," has been favorably received since his appearance here, but it was noticeable that the audience the first two days was composed chiefly of men. Tuesday at each performance there were more women and children than men and boys, according to the manager of the house.

A resolution introduced at the meeting of the city papas, intended to cut short the comedian's stay in Kansas City was defeated after Arbuckle had made an earnest plea to "be given a chance."

In his address before the council, Arbuckle offered to censor any part of his act to please the councilmen.

"What about that part where you say: 'I don't belong to any political party. In fact, I don't go to parties any more?'" he was asked.

"I take that out right away," Arbuckle replied.

And he did. For it was missing from his act at Tuesday's performances.

"All I ask is just a chance to live a clean life again," the comedian said.

"I had too much money and no one to direct me in the ways of disposing it."

POLISH ACTRESS AND TENNIS STAR LINKED BY RUMOR

Hollywood, Cal., August 2.—Again the cloak of romance has been thrown about the lovely shoulders of Pola Negri. William T. Tilden now shares with her the attention of those in Hollywood, who insist upon periodical reports for the tempestuous Polish actress.

It is the second time the tennis star has been linked with Pola in studio talk. Last summer they rode, swam, danced and dined together—there were reports of an impending announcement.

"But we are just friends," said Pola when asked if she and Tilden, seen together at dinner the other night, were rekindling a spark from last summer's romantic flurry.

"We are just friends," said Pola.

"But when she broke off her engagement to Charlie Chaplin, she told an interviewer, 'I admire Mr. Tilden very much.'"

WOMAN, 82, BOBS HAIR TO FULFILL LONG YEARNING

Salem, Mass., August 2.—At eighty-two, Mrs. Eliza Heffernan finally attained the courage of her convictions, and in celebration of her birthday marched to the barber and had her hair bobbed.

Syncopated locks had been a lifelong ambition of Mrs. Heffernan, but fear of being called "foolish" detained her from the idea.

"Years ago I thought of the same idea," she said, "but I figured people would call me foolish."

"But since so many young girls have taken to it, I did not see why I shouldn't—especially as I feel I am growing younger instead of older."

"I like it ever so much bobbed," Salem's 82-year-old flapper volunteered.

Clever Penwoman Left Trail Of Bad Checks Behind Her

New York, August 2.—A motherly, refined-appearing lady of 46 years is Margaret Hart, but too adroit in her handwriting.

Margaret, known as one of the most expert forgers in the country, has been arrested on her eighteenth charge of inditing names not her own.

Police found her in a department store, the same store in which she had passed a bad check a few days previous. While they were questioning her at headquarters, a message from Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived inquiring about a woman who had signed 30 bad checks in the Pennsylvania city.

Detectives, familiar with Margaret's widespread dexterity with the pen, glanced accusingly at her.

Juggled Divorce Entangles Banker in Love Dilemma

New York, August 2.—Here is a human triangle too intricate for the many steady-going folks, so a diagram is supplied. Wife No. 1 receives a divorce, but has divorce annulled. Meantime, husband has married wife No. 2. Then wife No. 1 retires to sue for divorce again, and will cite fact that husband is living with wife No. 2.

That is the geometry behind the Margaret Huntington Hall, in Asheville, N. C.

Then the first Mrs. Hall tangled everything up by obtaining an annulment of the divorce, which would seem to have left Mr. Hall with two wives. But the confusion bothers him not a bit.

He considers it presumptive, to say the least, that No. 1 should bring a new suit.

"She obtained her divorce legally in 'Palmer's' show," he explained, becoming dissatisfied with it for her own sake. He failed to obtain $50,000 she had expected and then, after I had married Mrs. Huntington, took steps to have it annulled. The annulment was granted in the lower courts, but I immediately appealed this decision to the higher courts. The appeal has not been decided, so Mrs. Mary Hall certainly has no right to claim me as a husband."

Ottawa, Ontario—Copper production in Canada in 1923 amounted to $18,886,000, or a gain of $12,520,180, as against $2,870,818 pounds, worth $5,738,177, according to a report of the bureau of statistics. Production was confined to the province of Ontario and British Columbia, which produced 31,656,800 pounds, worth $4,565,227, and 55,224,773 pounds, valued at $7,963,186, respectively.

Announcement of Mrs. Mary Austin Hall that she has started a new action for divorce from Clinton M. Hall, banker, and will emphasize the fact that he is abiding with his second wife, Mrs. Margaret Huntington Hall.

Mrs. Mary Austin Hall obtained a divorce from her husband at Palm Beach in March, 1923. A month after the decree was granted, Mr. Hall married his second and current wife, Mrs.

FORSYTH ATTRACTION IS BIG EUROPEAN ACT HODGES' "SALLIE LOU" HEADLINER AT LOEW'S

Tuneful Musical Comedy To Be Played All This Week.

Orloff Troupe Tops All-Star Bill of Vaudeville.

"Sally Lou"—

The name itself is synonymous of sweet music and honeysuckles, and Jimmie Hodges and his company of musical comedy stars are going to present their show by the same name this week at the Forsyth all week, the embodiment of all this—minus the honeysuckles.

It is another of those plays written by Mr. Hodges himself, which means it is filled with laughter and fun and music and dancing, for those who have followed each performance of the popular company since it opened its summer season at the Forsyth have learned to welcome the coming of the show.

It is another of those plays written by Mr. Hodges himself, which means it is filled with laughter and fun and music and dancing, for those who have followed each performance of the popular company since it opened its summer season at the Forsyth have learned to welcome the coming of the show.

And when the curtain rises on the first performance Monday night, each member of the company will be re-hearsed to point of genuine Broadway production.

Joe Reichman, pianist and composer of many popular songs, who has been seen with the Hodges company several times, has written the lyrics for the first week's show. He has exerted considerable effort, in adapting the songs into shape. For instance, he has made a study of more than two weeks of the pitch of Miss Bonnie Teaburn's voice, and has written a melody particularly adapted to her tone, which he found to out as an act that ranks among the best.

Moreover, Mr. Reichman has written a brand new song entitled "The Atlanta Strut" and it will be heard for the first time at this week's performance.

An augmented cast will be used in presenting "Sally Lou." Mr. Hodges has arranged a splendid male quartet and it will appear in several songs in this show.

The production also will be marked by the brilliant new costumes which have been provided under the direction of Mr. Hodges. The new costumes and scenic effects will make their first appearance this week, and their vividness is expected to add much to the splendor of the affair.

Miss Bonnie Teaburn, of course, is cast in the leading feminine role. Her part is another of those particularly adapted to her winsomeness and beauty. Miss Irene Sarli, beautiful soubrette of the company, will do several specialty numbers as will the King sisters, Don Armand and Bobby Gore, the dancing producer.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters will give its regular Tuesday candidates' luncheon at the Peacock cafe at 12:30 o'clock.

The candidates to be present are those running for state public service commission: J. D. Price, A. J. Woodruff, J. T. Boileau and O. R. Bennett.

These luncheons are given for the benefit of anyone wishing to meet the candidates and become acquainted with the men who are going to vote.

Everyone is urged to attend, especially the members of the league.

Brown's Women's Club.

The first meeting of the business women's branch of the Atlanta League of Women Voters will take place Monday night at 6:30 o'clock at the Peacock cafe, supper being served at that time. After supper an interesting program will be carried out as planned by Mrs. J. W. Wallace, vice president with who is sponsoring these meetings, to be held on the first Monday evening in every month, and Mr. Richardson, manager of the cafe, has kindly offered the dining hall on the third floor to the women from 5 to 8 so that they may rest before supper if they wish to.

Mrs. H. B. Chamberlain will give a short talk on women in business; Mrs. Sanford Gay, president of the league, will talk on "What the League Women Voters Can Do for the Woman in Business"; Mrs. T. R. Kendall will talk on "Signs of the Times" and Mrs. Olvi Robertson will give a short talk.

Miss Dannie Wesley, circle chairman of Trinity Methodist church; Mrs. Olvi Robertson, circle chairman of Brook Hills Methodist church; Miss Jessie Brannan, circle chairman of the Inman Park Methodist church; Miss Mary Frazier, circle chairman of the First Presbyterian church, and the circle chairmen from other churches in the city will assist Mrs. Wallace in her newly-formed club.

Mrs. Wallace urges that any interested in joining this branch of the league make a special effort to be present this first night.

Board Meeting.

The Atlanta League of Women Voters will hold its regular monthly board meeting next Tuesday at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Gay, president of the league, urges a large attendance as important matters are to come before the board, matters in which all members are deeply interested and their personal attention is needed.

Disabled Thirteen Weeks; Insurance to the Rescue

Insurance to the Rescue!

That's the Way It Turns Out Every Time.

Here's an Illustration:

L. Kelley, of 29 Wells street, Atlanta, was injured on April 1, 1924, when a wagon ran into him from which accident he reported that he was totally disabled for thirteen weeks.

Now, before the accident, Mr. Kelley had recognized the value of insurance, and had acted on that realization. He had subscribed to a $1,000 Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance policy issued him by The Constitution, for which he paid the mere sum of $1 per year and agreed to subscribe to The Daily and Sunday Constitution for that period.

PROVISIONS OF POLICY

This policy provides protection to the extent of $1,000 against death in certain wrecks, varying sums for permanent injuries and $10 weekly for disability. Under the terms of his policy, Mr. Kelley, on July 12, was paid the sum of $130.

A dividend of $130 on a $1 investment. Pretty soft, eh?

Along this line, attention might be called to another unparalleled opportunity to secure economical and efficient insurance offered by The Constitution in the form of its $500 Group Reader Life Insurance policy—the only straight life offer made by an Atlanta newspaper. This policy costs only 45 or 20 cents per week (depending on the risk) in addition to the regular subscription rates of The Daily and Sunday Constitution, and it remains in force as long as payments on the policy and on the subscription to The Constitution are maintained.

UNPARALLELED OPPORTUNITY

Every sane business man who has the welfare and comfort of his loved ones at heart cannot afford to overlook these two great insurance opportunities. Hundreds of wise people have "gotten theirs," and if you neglect to avail yourself of this great opportunity the fault lies at your own door.

You may be the next in the list of dead or injured. Take this tip:

Visit, write, or phone The Constitution's insurance department for full details of these two great offers. Particulars will be cheerfully supplied you.

Prominent Clubwomen Will Stage Benefit Bridge at Woman's Club

Mrs. D. F. Stephenson, at the left, vice president and chairman of the benefit bridge party of the Atlanta Woman's club. At the right is Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, who will assist Mrs. Stephenson in the first of a series of parties to be given Wednesday afternoon, August 6, at the club on Peachtree street. Mrs. Stephenson's photograph is by Stephenson and Mrs. McCutcheon's is by the Lewis studio.

The Atlanta Woman's club will be the scene of many lovely individual parties and congenial groups playing together Wednesday afternoon, August 6, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock, when the first of a splendid series of benefit bridge parties will be given.

Mrs. D. F. Stevens, the club's newly-elected president, will be in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, Mrs. Alice Taylor, Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, Mrs. A. P. Treadwell, Mrs. W. W. Springer and Mrs. Frank Rosier.

Ferns and cut flowers will enhance the beauty of the club rooms and tables will be grouped on the cool terraces and in the magnificent banqueting hall.

Useful Prizes to Be Given.

Useful prizes will be provided at each table and an unusually large array of handsome prizes will be drawn, including tickets, flowers, candies, theater tickets, home-made cakes and preserves, toilet articles and other household commodities too numerous to mention.

Many reservations have already been made, but other tables are available and may be reserved by calling Mrs. A. H. Hazzard, Hemlock 1350; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Hemlock 1257-W, or Mrs. Alice Taylor, Hemlock 1104.

The arts committee of the West End Woman's club, of which Miss Ellen Brooks is chairman, will have its regular meeting on next Wednesday, August 6. The meeting will be at 2 o'clock in the club rooms on Lee street.

The subject of study for this meeting will be "Handicrafts and Decorative Arts." The program will be preceded by demonstrations. Those taking part in the work will be Miss Ellen Brooks, Mrs. M. A. Proctor, Mrs. R. A. Eubanks and Mrs. Fred Johnson.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive board of the club has been postponed until Thursday morning, August 7, at 10 o'clock, in the club rooms.

On Wednesday, August 6, the club will have the exclusive right to sell drinks at the free barbecue on Cascade road. The property is about three blocks beyond the end of the Whitebridge street, about 100 yards from the bridge.

The steward will be in charge of Mrs. Chester Johnson, second vice president of the club, and she has especially requested the members of the executive board to assist her, as well as any members of the club who can.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive board of the club has been

Summer Music in New York

The Stadium Concerts

BY MARGUERITE BARTHOLOMEW

Seven years ago Adolph Lewisohn, foremost among New York's liberal patrons of music, presented the city with the handsome concrete stadium at Amsterdam avenue and 135th street, known as the Lewisohn stadium, to serve as a permanent home for a series of summer night concerts.

It was Theodore Lewisohn, with Utopian vision and a soaring ambition that aspired to a type of open-air entertainment making for the cultural uplift of the masses, originated the idea in his summer night orchestral concerts held in Central park sixty years ago. The idea grew steadily in public favor, but the idea of elevating popular musical taste from its former intolerance of all save the banal and the trite, to its present critical discrimination was accomplished only by patient and unfaltering efforts through the decades.

Over ten thousand persons in the attendance of last year over the audiences of 1922, the orchestra stand was moved back, making space for over 3,000 seats in the field, the entire seating capacity this season approximating 13,000.

In a line of space roped off directly in front of the orchestra stand, tables are reserved for guarantors and their friends, who sit about them European fashion quaffing prohibition beverages. And skirting the field is the stadium, an imposing semi-circular structure of solid concrete, its uniform tiers of white shelf-like seats surrounded by a space of immovable masters under the impenetrable starlit azure of a summer night! The lofty idealism and unflinching courage of Beethoven and the mystic spirituality of Cesare Franchi, the brooding introspection of Brahms, the despairing pessimism of Tschauder, the noble philosophy of Richard Wagner, the joyous exuberance of Richard Strauss, the serenity and joyousness of Schubert, the voluptuous beauty of Debussy, the quaint peasant lore of Grieg—all of these take on a deeper and more vital significance, like voices attuned to the infinite and inscrutable purposes of a universe!
